Japan's Acts In China Concern U.S., Hull Asserts

Won't Be Involved In Original British Dispute, He Adds; Welles Deplores War

Reprisals Delayed

BRITISH REPRISALS against Japan apparently were delayed while Tokyo was asked to clarify its intentions in connection with the Tientsin blockade, which continued behind electrified wire.—Page 4.

Eyes on the Orient

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull, in a formal statement, yesterday served notice that this country, as well as Great Britain, is concerned with Japan's recent restrictive decrees and actions at Tientsin and in "other parts of China."

Immediately, thoughts in the Capital were turned to possible steps, chiefly economic, open to this country should Japan's course in her campaign to dominate all Asia become so repressive on American interests as to be unbearable. There was renewed discussion of President Roosevelt's reference last winter to "steps short of war" that might be directed against aggressors.

State Department officials, however, would not discuss any phases or possibilities aside from those in the Secretary's statement.

As if to sweep away any possible talk that the United States might be pulling British chestnuts out of the fire, Secretary Hull opened his statement with the assertion that the United States is not concerned in the original British-Japanese dispute that led to Japan's imposition of a blockade against the British concession at Tientsin, where some 400 Americans live.

Watches With Special Interest

The statement said:

"This Government is not concerned in the original incident at Tientsin relating to the requested delivery of the four accused Chinese. It is concerned, however, with the nature and significance of subsequent developments, in their broader aspects, coupled with other past and present acts and utterances in other parts of China. This Government, therefore, is observing with special interest all related developments in China as they occur from day to day. I have nothing further to add today."

Additional evidence of official misgivings toward the trend of events in Japanese-occupied China was seen in an address by Undersecretary Welles at Brown University yesterday. Illustrating the "tragic deterioration in the standards of international relationships," Welles pointed to "the greater part of Asia, . . . involved in a conflict which endangers the lives and the security of hundreds of millions of human beings, and of which no cessation is as yet in sight."

U. S. Has Warned Before

Secretary Hull, making public his statement at his daily press conference, told reporters that Eugene Dooman, United States Charge d'Affaires at Tokyo, some days ago had suggested to the Japanese government that the good offices of the American consul general at Tientsin be used in mediation. No further word on the offer had been received at the State Department, Hull said.

The Secretary said there was no news pertaining to the reported food shortage in the Tientsin concession.

Squalus Commander Re-enacts Fatal Dive

Navy Board Watches Moves on Sister Ship as Official Inquiry Opens; Ford and Sen. Walsh See Sabotage

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 19.—Beneath the closed hatches of a sister submarine, Lieut. Oliver F. Naquin re-enacted for a naval inquiry board today the operations aboard his submersible, the Squalus, prior to her fatal plunge to the ocean bottom almost a month ago.

Earlier, as high ranking officers opened the investigation at Portsmouth Navy Yard, the first witness testified that a faulty air induction valve might have allowed tons of water to pour into the Squalus, which still holds 26 of her entombed in 240 feet of water 15 miles off this port.

LT. NAQUIN

Suspicions of sabotage were voiced, meanwhile, from widely separated sectors. Henry Ford told farm camp boys at Detroit that he believed all three recent submarine disasters—the Squalus, the Thetis, the Phoenix—were caused "by sabotage," while at Washington, Senator Walsh, (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, declared the triple sinking, within one month, "prompts the inquiry that these are more than coincidence."

The first day of the public inquiry was not without its dramatic incidents.

There was a tense moment as the "court" opened in a room, hung with blueprints of the ill-fated craft.

Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, head of the investigating board, turned toward the Squalus' commander.

"Have you any complaint," the admiral asked, "against any of the surviving members of the crew?"

"I have nothing but praise for them," Naquin answered quietly.

Then, his 32 surviving officers and men were asked if they had any

Rep. Church Demands Fallon Quit

Accuses Federal Insurance Official Of Using U. S. Funds For Trips Home

Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, yesterday demanded the resignation of Nugent Fallon, general manager of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, on a charge of using Government funds "for his own personal pleasure" in traveling between Washington and his homes at Forest Hills, N. Y., and Swampscott, Mass.

Speaking from the House floor when all but five members had left following passage of the new tax bill, Church charged that Fallon's conduct "has been a deliberate fraud, and such a man is not entitled to hold the responsible position that he now holds, where he handles millions of dollars of money belonging to the people."

While most of Church's attack was aimed directly at Fallon, he also accused Federal Home Loan Bank Board officers, under whom the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation operates, with "collusion with these officials (of the insurance corporation) by approving their use of Government funds for week-end trips home."

Cites G. A. O. Records

Church cited General Accounting Office records which showed that Fallon had made 43 trips, all but two of them to Boston or New York City, between December, 1935, and September, 1938. Twenty-eight of these, he noted, were made over week-ends or holidays. The total cost was $2,590.01.

FHLBB officials last night emphatically defended Fallon. Through a spokesman, Fallon categorically denied ownership of a summer home in Massachusetts and said that during the entire period of the trips his Forest Hills home had been closed or rented and that his family had been in Washington. The spokesman said that every trip had been approved by the board, and had been taken with their express permission, that Fallon's field work had been conducted on his own time by sacrificing his week-ends, that Church's listing of the trips gave an unfair picture inasmuch as Fallon had traveled to many other sections of the country, but that trips to New York and Boston occurred more frequently because the Nation's two centers of concentrated insurance savings programs were in Massachusetts and the New Jersey-New York areas.

Persecution Charged

The spokesman added that Church was attempting "to crucify Fallon for perfectly legitimate operations." He said that Fallon was the sole executive in charge of the program from 1935 to September, 1938, and that the travel was "absolutely necessary" and the conduct of business over the week-ends was essential.

GAO records which Church displayed showed that Fallon's trips had been challenged by the former

D. C. Income Tax Faces Senate Ax

King Opens Hearing Today; Extension of Privilege Levy Is Likely Alternative

By James D. Secrest.

With the political cards stacked against it, a proposed District income tax will be the subject of a hearing today before the Senate District Committee in the Capitol.

Chairman King will open the inquiry at 10 a. m. and continue it as long as any citizens desire to be heard, he said, after which the committee will go into executive session and decide whether to approve a modified income tax or to propose re-enactment of the stop-gap business privilege levy with a real estate rate of between $1.60 and $1.75.

The citizens' advisory committee yesterday decided to stand pat on its alternative recommendation that the "emergency" taxes of the last two years be renewed, after Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, presented to Senator King a draft of an income tax bill that dips far below the $2,000 base voted by the House.

Lowers Exemptions to $500

Morgan, acting upon instructions of Chairman King, drew up a measure that would dip into the pocketbook of practically every wage earner in the District. Single persons would be allowed a primary exemption of only $500 and married persons $1,500 with $200 permitted for each dependent.

The scale of rates, however, is below that of the House bill. The proposed tax is 1 per cent on the first $2,000 net income instead of 2 per cent on the first $1,000 and steps up 1 per cent for each $2,000 additional increase in net income until 7 per cent is reached. Thus the King plan would impose a tax of 7 per cent on all net income in excess of $12,000, whereas the House bill would be generally 1 per cent higher for each bracket and would apply the 7 per cent at $9,000 net income.

Taxes Legislators

In submitting the plan, Morgan explained that the loss in revenue from the lowering of the rate would be offset by the dropping of the base from $2,000 to $500 and $1,500, respectively.

The Senate bill also contains a specified provision applying the tax to members of Congress and corrects the omission of the word "not" from a nonresident definition so that Government employes will be unable to escape the District tax merely because of the maintenance of voting residence in the States.

Unless the attitude of members of the District committee changes, the King bill has even slimmer prospects of being approved than the original House plan. Moreover, House members insist that the House will never accept a tax plan that taps the salaries of members of Congress.

While the citizens advisory committee held probably its last meeting of the year on the local revenue problem, Senate and House confer-

House Passes Tax Bill; Profits Levy Killed, Nuisance Imposts Kept

'Appeasement' Tax Highlights

Highlights of the "business appeasement" tax bill passed yesterday by the House:

Yields $1,644,000,000 total, an estimated $15,000,000 less than current revenue.

Eliminates the 2½ per cent remnant of the old undivided profits tax, effective next year.

Substitutes 18 per cent flat corporate tax on firms earning more than $25,000 and continues present 12½ to 16 per cent graduated rates on companies earning less than $25,000.

Extends for two years $544,300,000 in temporary "nuisance" taxes and continues the $100,000,000 emergency 3-cent rate on non-local first-class mail. Both otherwise would expire June 30.

Permits corporations to carry over net operating losses for two years, deducting losses of a bad year from profits in a good one in computing taxes.

Allows corporations to increase their capital stock valuations for each of the two years, 1930 and 1940, providing a buffer against steep excess profits taxes. Present law barred revaluation up or down until 1941.

Measure Voted, 358-1; Tinkham Protests Business Will Get Slight Aid

By Robert C. Albright

The House yesterday voted, 358 to 1, to strike the last vestige of the undivided profits levy and other tax "irritants" from the revenue structure.

Substituted were flat corporate taxes and a limited revision designed to "encourage business" without diminishing Federal revenue.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, cast the lone dissenting vote. The bewhiskered Tinkham guffawed loudly when he found himself standing alone.

"Mine was a protest vote," he later told reporters. "This will be of very slight help to business. There should have been more concessions and nuisance taxes should have been altogether repealed."

Bill Not Altered

The $1,644,300,000 bill, carrying a two-year extension of $544,300,000 in expiring excise taxes and retaining the 3-cent non-local postage rate, yielding another $100,000,000, was passed in six hours without change.

It goes to the Senate, where the bill, with some revision, is expected to be hurried to final enactment before the June 30 deadline for expiration of the so-called nuisance and postage levies.

House Republicans fought vainly to send the seven-year-old nuisance taxes to oblivion along with the undivided profits tax and to apply the new modified corporate tax rates to this year's income. The bill's corporate relief provisions start with the next taxable year.

A Republican motion to recommit the bill to move up the tax relief provisions to this year's corporate income was defeated, 150 to 205, and passage immediately followed.

Outstanding provision of the bill substitutes a flat corporate tax of 18 per cent for the undivided profits levy on companies earning more than $25,000 annually.

The existing 12½ to 16 per cent graduated rates would be continued on corporations earning less than $25,000.

These rates on small corporations will range:

12½ per cent on the first $5,000.
14 per cent on the next $15,000.
16 per cent on the next $5,000.

Notch Provision

A so-called "notch" provision to aid companies earning only slightly above $25,000 would apply a 32 per cent rate on that portion of the income in excess of $25,000. Companies earning up to $31,964 would thus benefit.

Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, and his tax subcommittee chairman, Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, directed the drive for passage, while Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee, led the Republican fight for broader business concessions.

Doughton told the House that coupled with tax easement provided in the Social Security bill "any fair-minded person will agree we have gone as far as we can." He declared the bill was not written to increase revenue but "in so far as possible to give encouragement and relief to business."

Freer Capital Flow Seen

Cooper said the measure should encourage business activity and a freer flow of capital into productive enterprise, but care had been taken not to endanger revenue yields from the existing tax structure. The bill is estimated to produce within $15,000,000 of existing collections.

In a series of proposed amendments, Treadway sought elimination

Administration Demands Vote On Neutrality

President Reported To Have Threatened Special Session

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt threw down the gage of battle on the neutrality issue yesterday, thereby opening what many legislators expect to be the most strenuous contest in foreign affairs since the debate over American entry into the League of Nations.

According to well-informed legislators, the President told Congressional leaders at a White House conference that he wanted a vote on neutrality legislation in both the House and Senate this session, regardless of how long that might delay adjournment.

One Senator added that the Chief Executive virtually committed himself to call a special session if action is not taken on the legislation and if a new international crisis should arise after Congress goes home.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, majority leader, said, however, that it had been decided to press for a decision at this session. This decision means that Congress may be here all summer and into the fall. Only a few days ago a bloc of 21 Senators, including most of the so-called "mandatory neutrality block," signed a round robin declaring that there could be no compromise on legislation which would repeal the present law's provision for an automatic embargo on arms shipments to nations at war.

Such a repealer is contained in the Hull neutrality bill, the Ad-

U.S. Welcomes Brazil's Army Chief Today

52 Battle Planes, Tanks to Escort Guest In Military Reception

With an outstretched hand and impressive military display, the Army and Navy will welcome the chief of the Brazilian army to the United States today.

Greeting Gen. Pedro Aurelio Goes Monteiro as he steps off the U. S. Navy cruiser Nashville at 2 p. m. at Annapolis will be virtually the entire Army command, ranking Navy officers and Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle. Planes, tanks, cavalry and a mounted band will assist during the day to give the visitor a welcome approaching that extended to the sovereigns of Great Britain and the President of Nicaragua.

Accompanied by Gen. Marshall

Then "flying fortresses" and 42 fast pursuit planes—the same group which saluted King George and Queen Elizabeth two weeks ago—will form an escort for Gen. Monteiro early this morning. They will meet the Nashville at the Virginia Capes and accompany the vessel part way up the Chesapeake.

Accompanying Gen. Monteiro to the United States is Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, who soon will become Chief of Staff of the American Army. He has just completed a good-will tour of Brazil, honors which this Government will repay during the Brazilian army chief's 26-day visit in the United States.

Gen. Malin Craig, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, will go to the Naval Academy to greet Gen. Monteiro on behalf of the American Army. After an inspection of the academy, accompanied by a Navy guard of honor, the party will go to Fort George G. Meade, Md., for a military review, scheduled for 4 p. m

To Lunch With President

Arriving at the District line at 5 o'clock, the party will be met by four Cavalry tanks. They will escort the visitors to the Brazilian Embassy, via Maryland avenue, the Capitol, Constitution avenue and Rock Creek parkway. At the embassy there will be a squadron of Cavalry as guard of honor, and a band to play the Brazilian national anthem.

Gen. Monteiro will have lunch with President Roosevelt Thursday before leaving on an aerial tour of the United States, visiting Army posts and points of interest. Dinners, receptions and a sightseeing

Imperial Airways Atlantic Plane Burns at Base

Southampton, England, June 19 (AP).—The Imperial Airways seaplane Connemara, designed for transatlantic service, was destroyed and one of six engineers aboard her was reported missing tonight in fire of unknown origin at the seaplane base at Hythe near here.

The Connemara, one of Imperial Airways' C Class $200,000 "Empire Flying Boats," was burned out after an explosion aboard a tank barge from which she was being refueled prior to a test flight.

Roaring flames and intense heat balked an attempt to uncouple the plane from the barge.

Admiral Leahy's Niece Jilts Fiance En Route to Wedding

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 19.—Miss Elizabeth Ann Tuttle, 21-year-old niece of Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of United States naval operations, has called off her July 1 wedding to Clement E. Smoot, jr., of Los Angeles, and will go to Reno Friday to become the bride of Dr. Roy Barnett Cohn, of San Francisco.

The original wedding invitations, 400 of them, went out some time ago. Over the week-end formal notices to all the guests were dispatched, saying the wedding would not be held.

Tonight everybody knew about it except young Smoot, who already had started West from Houston, Tex., where he worked in one of his father's electrical equipment office branches, when his fiancee changed her mind. Miss Tuttle said she had written and telegraphed him and telephoned his mother.

Dr. Cohn is 29, a graduate of Stanford Medical School and of Harvard. Smoot also is a Stanford man.

Miss Tuttle was employed here as a private secretary in a bank and after she resigned her position to return to Colusa and prepare her trousseau she said doubts assailed her. When Dr. Cohn visited her there this week-end, it was all decided, she said.

Miss Tuttle met the young physician when he was called in by another physician to perform an appendectomy upon her last January.

She is the daughter of A. Darwin Tuttle, insurance man and grain broker in Colusa.

Beer Bottle (Thrown) Puts Bandit to Flight

An accurately thrown beer bottle last night put to flight an armed bandit who attempted to rob a District merchant and inadvertently spoil the latter's celebration of his eighteenth wedding anniversary.

As Sam Fischer, 40, proprietor of a grocery store at 1947 First street northwest, prepared to join his wife, Nora, 36, and three children, for the celebration in their upstairs apartment, the colored bandit entered brandishing a .38-caliber pistol.

After forcing Fischer into a back room, the man attempted to break open the locked cash register, when Fischer grazed his head with a perfect strike. The man fled.

D. C. Man Drowns At Bay Resort

George White, 33, of 4910 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was drowned early yesterday when he fell into the choppy waters of Chesapeake Bay while fishing from the long pier at Chesapeake Beach, Md.

White apparently misjudged his footing in darkness according to Chesapeake Beach police. A powerful undertow prevented recovery of his body.

Frank Fletcher, of the Wisconsin avenue address, and Louis Schwartz, 2816 Olive avenue northwest, had driven with White to Chesapeake Beach but were fishing at some distance from him and did not see the accident. White was a gasoline station attendant.

Dr. Grace Abbott, Child Labor Law Pioneer, Dies

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—Dr. Grace Abbott, 60, chief of the United States Children's Bureau from 1921 to 1934 and since then a member of the University of Chicago faculty, died tonight in Billings Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Abbott, chosen in a nationwide poll in 1931 as one of America's 12 most distinguished women, had been ill more than a week with anemia.

She was a pioneer and leader in the fight for a child labor amendment and served on numerous governmental commissions and committees.

Dr. Abbott came to the University of Chicago in 1934 to join her sister, Edith Abbott, dean of the school of social service administration. She was professor of public welfare administration.

Miss Abbott's work since 1934 had been largely academic, yet she kept her finger on the pulse of the Nation's welfare work by frequent consultation with national leaders.

Mussel Poison Kills 6, Sickens 30

San Francisco, June 19 (AP).—Agonizing death struck four times today to bring to six the number of fatalities from mussel poisoning this season along the west-central coast of California.

At least 30 other persons were in hospitals, some critically ill. Two died in Oakland today, another at Monterey and the fourth at Gilroy. The others died last week.

C. T. Claggett, Telephone Executive, Dies

Funeral Will Be Held Tomorrow at St. Alban's Church

Charles T. Claggett, 65, of 3202 Eighteenth street northwest, died yesterday at his home after a long illness. He had completed more than 35 years of service with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in this city and at the time of his death was assistant to the general manager.

Mr. Claggett, a direct descendant of Capt. Thomas Claggett, who emigrated to Maryland in 1670, was born near Upper Marlboro, Md., on October 24, 1873, the son of Thomas and Mary Bowie Claggett. He received his schooling at Marlboro Academy and Prince Georges County High School. Entering the telephone business in Washington in 1903 as commercial agent, he became cashier in 1908, and later served as contract agent and as contract manager, until his appointment in 1916 as district manager. He was made general commercial superintendent in 1918, a position he held for ten years.

In 1904, Mr. Claggett was married to Leta Lutz, of Leesburg, Va., who survives him, together with their four children, Mrs. Ida Claggett Hoeber, of Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Bowie Claggett Wright; Charles Thomas Claggett, jr., and Elizabeth Lutz Claggett, of Washington.

Mr. Claggett was for many years active in the civic and charitable work of the city, particularly in connection with boys' clubs and the Community Chest. He was a member of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Thomas Noyes Masonic Lodge, the Rotary Club and the Washington Golf and Country Club, of which he was a member of the board of governors.

Services will be held at St. Alban's Church tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. The Rev. Charles Warner will officiate. Interment will be at Leesburg, Va.

Bates Brands Milk Bill Vote Invalid

Claims House Was in Session When Report Ballot Was Taken

Members of the House from Maryland and Virginia yesterday prepared to use every parliamentary maneuver to defeat the Schulte bill to open the Washington milkshed when it is called up in the House next Monday, after the measure had been ordered reported in executive committee session by a vote of 11 to 5.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, called the measure the "most poorly drafted legislation I've ever seen" and indicated he will lead opposition along with Chairman Bates of the House sub-committee which conducted the milk inquiry.

Bates raised three points of order against the bill in committee, it was learned, but was overruled by Chairman Randolph. Subsequently, he introduced in the House his measure to create a five-man commission to control the dairy industry in Washington.

The bill may be challenged on one or more points of order when called up in the House next District day, it was learned, as members apparently voted with watches in front of them to ascertain whether the House had convened.

Bates, who said his watch was at 12 o'clock noon when Chairman Randolph called for a vote, asserted the committee action is invalid as the House had convened. Randolph said his watch showed it was not quite 12 o'clock.

Two other points of order raised by Bates were that the bill was not properly before the full committee

Senators Back McCarran in 'Courtesy' Row

For the second time this session, the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday sustained the traditional "Senatorial courtesy" rule, disapproving, 13 to 5, the President's nomination of a Nevada district attorney.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, had protested appointment of William S. Boyle was "personally offensive and obnoxious" to him. Although the nominee was supported by Senator Pittman, from the same State, the committee honored McCarran's objections under the time-worn courtesy custom.

DICTOGRAPH: A Certain Rich Man has offered the Government (so goes the Capital's 5 o'clock chatter) to settle his income tax troubles for $5,000,000 . . . Of all the cracks people made to the King and Queen here (or now think they made, on second thought) my favorite is Texas Congressman Patton's, as he shook hands with Elizabeth:

"—just a look at twilight"

Toward twilight of a June evening these days you can see a short, chunky man with bushy silver eyebrows sitting on the roof of the Hotel Washington, across from the Treasury (where they serve the biggest Manhattans in town), gazing pensively toward the White House grounds just this side of the sunset. . . . Beyond lies Texas.

It's Jack Garner, the rubicund v. p., with his evening cigar.

So the Mayor handed her his package of matches, and she lit it herself. Gosh-dern, ziggity-dog! The Princess really earned that smoke!

Senators Approve Bill to Underwrite Farm Purchases

The Senate Agriculture Committee approved yesterday a bill under which the Federal Government could underwrite $350,000,000 of private loans for the purchase of farms.

The bill, by Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, would apply to farm-purchase loans, a principle similar to that followed in the home-loan field by the Federal Housing Administration.

Aides of Lee said 52 Senators, a majority, had signed the measure as co-authors, and that Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, would press for a similar bill in the House.

Adams Assails Roosevelt's Money Powers

Senate Bloc Seeks To Kill President's Authority to Devalue

An attack against extension of the President's power to reduce the gold content of the dollar was launched on the floor of the Senate yesterday by a conservative coalition headed by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado in the absence of Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, who was ill.

With opponents of devaluation estimating their voting strength at about 40, Chairman Wagner, of the Banking and Currency Committee, lauded the bill as "essential for the maintenance of adequate monetary defenses for the United States."

The measure, which already has passed the House, would extend until June 30, 1941, the President's right to fix the gold content of the dollar at any point between 50 and 60 per cent of its weight prior to 1934. At the present time the dollar is 59 per cent of its former weight —that is, it is worth 59 cents of the old dollar.

Adams Concentrates Fire

The bill would also extend for two more years the President's power to maintain the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and to buy newly-mined domestic silver for coinage at a price above the world market.

Concentrating his fire on the provision authorizing the President to cut 9 cents more from the old value of the dollar, Senator Adams asserted that the United States is the only nation which, in a sound condition and not threatened with collapse, has devalued its currency.

The Coloradoan introduced an amendment providing that the devaluation powers be permitted to expire a week from Friday and cutting off the silver purchase powers January 15, 1941, five and a half months earlier than the deadline in the House bill.

Meanwhile, the Senate silver bloc was perfecting plans for an attempt to amend the bill with provisions raising the Government price of silver and delving into the stabilization fund to meet Federal expenses. The silver proposals will be advanced immediately after the Senate votes on the Adams amendment this afternoon.

Asserting that the President's devaluation power is "our chief weapon in preventing the initiation of currency wars," Senator Wagner declared he wanted the power to continue "for the same reason I want a Navy." He said he didn't wish to use the power, but wanted to have it at hand as a warning to other countries.

Held Necessary to Trade

The bill, said Senator Wagner, "is indispensable to the safeguarding of our export trade and the protection of our home markets; its enactment will contribute both to domestic recovery and to international monetary stability."

When Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, asked the nature of the emergency prompting Congressional "delegation of constitutional powers to the President," Wagner's reply was: "The chaotic condition of the world."

Devaluation, said Senator Adams, "strikes down or impairs" confidence in the soundness of government and the maintenance of consumer buying power. He maintained that the 1934 devaluation had reduced the "intrinsic value" of bank deposits and credits by 41 per cent.

Both Adams and Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, argued that the devaluation powers are incompatible with the stabilization fund. It is "silly," said Senator Tydings, to have a $2,000,000,000 stabilizing fund and in the same bill a means of unstabilizing the currency.

Vigorously objecting to this interpretation, Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, retorted that one power "is to be used to cope with the ordinary fluctuations of currencies, the other in event a government takes action to change the value of its currency."

Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, said he would propose an amendment to the House bill forbidding the purchase of foreign silver.

Welles Raps Bans On South America Trade With U. S.

Providence, R. I., June 19 (AP).—Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, today told Brown University alumni there was little hope of the United States establishing friendly markets or a "practical economic and commercial foundation" in South America with a restrictive trade policy.

Referring to the recent purchase of canned beef from Argentina by the Navy Department, which Congress has now banned, he said:

"It would seem to me very clear that if we continue in our relations with Argentina, and with some of our great neighbors to the south, a policy . . . which in essence amounts to an embargo upon their sales to us, we can have little hope of finding in future years in these countries a logical and a friendly market for our goods, or of establishing that practical economic and commercial foundation for our inter-American policy which is indispensable if our relations are to grow closer in the years to come."

Others besides Welles awarded honorary degrees included Justice Roberts of the Supreme Court, doctor of laws; Eric Earl Wendelin, First Consul of the American Embassy at Madrid, master of arts; William Setchell Learned, staff member of Carnegie Foundation for Advancement of Teaching, doctor of letters; Vannevar Bush, president Carnegie Institution, Washington, D. C., doctor of laws.

Rep. Taylor, of Colorado, Oldest in House, And Holt, 'Baby' of Senate, Mark Birthdays

The oldest member of the House of Representatives — Representative Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, yesterday received the tribute of his fellow colleagues on his eighty-first birthday.

REP. TAYLOR

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, told the House that Taylor, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, is still "strong, vigorous and virile and his blood still runs warm for this country."

After the House had applauded him, the aged legislator said:

"We have a great country. We should be proud of it, and do our best to serve it."

Taylor was born June 19, 1858, at Metamora, Ill. He has served in the House for 30 years.

At the same time Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, the "baby" member of the Senate, marked his thirty-fourth birthday anniversary.

Holt was congratulated by Senate colleagues. He took his oath as a Senator in 1935, when he was 30.

The Senate confirmed the nominations of Claude G. Bowers, of New York, former Ambassador to Spain, as Ambassador to Chile; Edwin G. Wilson, Minister to Uruguay, and Douglas Jenkins, of South Carolina, Minister to Bolivia.

At the same time, Elmer D. Davies, of Tennessee, was nominated to be United States district judge for the Middle District of his State by President Roosevelt.

The Senate Judiciary Committee agreed to vote July 3 on proposed constitutional amendments requiring a national referendum before declaration of an offensive war and establishing a six-year term for the President.

Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, said the committee would vote June 26 on two constitutional amendments proposed by Senator Andrews (Democrat), Florida. One would prevent more than two Supreme Court justices being appointed from any one judicial circuit; the other would permit Congress to levy taxes for payment of old-age pensions.

The House passed and sent to the White House a conference report on the Lea bill, extending until January 1, 1940, the effective date of labeling provisions of the pure food and drug act.

ministration measure. Authoritative sources said yesterday that the President and his Congressional advisers had agreed that the bill should be passed by the House next week so that debate on it could be started in the Senate about July 1.

"We intend to defer adjournment until the Senate disposes of the legislation," one highly placed legislator said. "We don't think there will be a filibuster against it, but neither do we think that the bill can be passed in even two or three weeks."

It was learned that House leaders, expecting their legislative slate to be clear of major matters in two weeks, already had made plans for three-day recesses of that chamber while the historic debate on neutrality goes on in the Senate.

Although all the Senatorial opponents of the Administration program have denied that they plan to filibuster, Senator Borah has said:

"Juging by the past, if we undertake to dispose of this legislation we will be here until September."

Assailed as "Unneutral."

Legislators opposing the automatic arms embargo have asserted that it would be "unneutral" for the United States, in event of war in Europe, to deny Great Britain and France freedom to buy arms here to defend themselves against heavily armed Germany and Italy.

Secretary of State Hull told Congress that there was no logical basis for clapping an embargo on arms while giving belligerents access to other materials necessary in war.

On the other hand, signers of the senatorial round robin have attacked the repealer at likely to increase the chances of United States participation in war. They asserted that an open alliance with Great Britain, France, Russia or Japan would be "more honest" than the sale of munitions in wartime to nations which control the seas.

Besides repealing the embargo clause, the Administration bill would require belligerents to take title to goods before they leave the United States. It also would permit the President to forbid Americans to travel in combat zones.

Two Purgees Launch Fight On Third Term

Senator Burke Foresees End of Republic if Tradition Is Broken

Two conservative Democratic Senators, one of whom was on the Administration's "purge" list last year, yesterday announced unrelenting opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt.

Senator Burke, of Nebraska, warned in a radio address over the N. B. C network that overthrow of the Republic might follow if the tradition against a third term should be broken next year.

Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, who was re-elected last year despite early being marked for the "purge," announced that he was opposed to "the renomination or re-election of President Roosevelt or any other man for a third term."

It appeared, meanwhile, that the fight against a third term might reach the Senate. The Senate Judiciary Committee agreed to vote July 3 on a joint resolution offered by Burke proposing a Constitutional amendment limiting the tenure of Presidents to one term of six years.

Van Nuys said he would support Paul V. McNutt, Philippine High Commissioner and former Indiana Governor, for the 1940 nomination.

Burke gave no indication of his preference. His speech was in the nature of a reply to third term agitation by New Dealers, in which Secretary of the Interior Ickes has taken the lead.

Van Nuy's announcement recalled that Senator Minton, his Indiana colleague, had declared last week that the McNutt organization would "get behind President Roosevelt" if the President should again be a candidate.

Both Burke and Van Nuys were bitter opponents of the President's court reorganization bill. It was Van Nuys' activity against this bill that caused him to be one of last year's purgees.

Burke predicted that "a vast host of followers of Jefferson" would bolt the Democratic Party if the President should be renominated next year.

Fruit Growers Enjoin Wage-Hour Order

Jacksonville, Fla., June 19 (AP).—Federal District Judge Alexander Akerman issued a temporary order today restraining the Government from enforcing provisions of the wage-hour law against citrus processors.

Five concerns attacked a ruling by Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews that firms purchasing fruit within a 10-mile radius of their plants were exempt under the "area of production" clause of the act, but that those purchasing fruit from groves greater distances away were subject to the law's wage and hour limitations.

U. S. Asks Canada To Search Forest For Missing Flier

The State Department yesterday requested the Canadian Government to investigate a new clew to the disappearance of Tommy Smith, Los Angeles flier missing three weeks after a take-off in his "Baby Clipper" plane on a projected transatlantic hop.

The official act came at the instigation of Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, to whom the pilot's mother, Mrs. Harvey Smith, of Clarksburg, W. Va., forwarded a letter she received from New Brunswick residents reporting the noise of a plane on the day Smith was flying and a "terrific explosion." The forest area were the explosion occurred, according to the letter, can be entered only with permission of the Dominion government.

Holt said there was a possibility of the Canadian Mounted Police searching the area and that Smith, an expereinced parachute jumper, may still be alive in the forest.

AMERICAN AIRLINES has expressed its confidence in 1939 by investing $1,400,000.00 in 12 additional 21-passenger Flagships. American operates the largest fleet of Douglas transport planes in the world.

American believes that 1939 will be the best year so far in air transport history. For the five months ending May 31, American Airlines carried 45,785 more passengers than in the same 1938 period, an increase of 40.2 per cent. In May, American carried 47,722 revenue passengers—a world record. No air line ever before carried as many passengers in a single month!

Air travel is increasing faster than any other form of scheduled transportation ever increased before. American is prepared for it. Its current increase in Washington schedules, for example, provides a total of seven daily flights to New York, three daily round trips to Chicago, four to Texas and three to California. American provides the only through service from Washington to Chicago and to the West Coast.

Quick to anticipate and to meet the travel needs of the public, with an extraordinary attention to passenger comfort and dependability of service, American looks forward to a record year!

Frank Morgan Accuses Aides Of Buckner

Describes Philippine Bond Deal at Trial Of Beauty Lobbyists

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 19.—Bumbling Frank Morgan, whose inane dialogue has brought him fame on radio and screen, testified in Federal Court today that he refused to invest in a scheme to redeem Philippine Railway bonds because it "sounded fantastic."

Although Morgan was the only movie celebrity to make an appearance at the trial of William P. Buckner, jr., and four others accused of mail fraud, spectators sat alert as the names of Loretta Young and Miriam Hopkins were drawn into testimony, along with those of actors Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall and Leon Erroll.

Morgan said he was approached in 1938 by two defendants, John Hyde, British actor, and Charles Turner, a broker.

Quezon Mentioned

"From what I gathered," related Morgan, "there was some sort of proposition of Philippine railway bonds which were then selling at about 11 and which I was informed were going to be redeemed by the Philippine government at 65."

The comedian declared Turner spoke of "an executive, and I understood the executive could be influenced or persuaded."

He said this "executive" was identified by Turner as President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines.

The hearing opened last week with testimony concerning what the Government has dubbed a "beauty lobby" in Washington.

Another witness today, James W. Liddle, Buffalo, theatrical producer, said he put up about $10,000. A fourth of this, he said, was intended for Felipe Buencamino, Filipino senator, who the Government charges was to be paid to push redemption legislation.

Solicit Movie Stars

Liddle said the Buckner group kept him informed by telegraph of efforts to interest movie stars. One of these read: "Bill (Buckner) has been with Loretta Young all the time; don't know whether he will marry her or not."

Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Miriam Hopkins and Leon Errol were mentioned in other telegrams as movie people to whom Buckner or his aides appealed.

Velma West, hammer slayer (inset), and cell at Marysville, Ohio, Reformatory from which she escaped

By the Associated Press.

Marysville, Ohio, June 19.—Velma West, flapper era husband slayer, escaped from a reformatory today to have "one last good time," and tonight was the object of a State-wide hunt.

Mrs. West, then vivacious, and 21, killed Thomas Edward West with a hammer in 1927 when he refused to attend a bridge party—then went to the party alone.

Today at 33, fearing death from heart trouble and despairing of freedom after 11 years' imprisonment, the emaciated slayer fled with three other inmates of the Ohio Reformatory for Women.

She left a note for Mrs. Marguerite Reilley, reformatory head, indicating she had abandoned hope of parole and bespeaking the "last good time." The parole board last year continued to its maximum her sentence of five years to life.

An honor prisoner, she expressed regret for the escape and said she would return if it "hurt" Mrs. Reilley "too much." An assistant reported Mrs. West was in poor health due to a heart condition, and had expressed fear of death.

The three with whom she fled were held on less serious charges. Officials theorized they stole keys to their cells and dormitory. Apparently no one saw them leave.

John Carmody Added to List For Works Job

Jones Alone Appears Certain of Choice for 1 of 3 Merger Posts

The name of John M. Carmody, Rural Electrification Administrator, yesterday was added to the list of those reported being seriously considered to head the new Federal Works agency created by the President's Reorganization Plan No. 1.

Carmody's REA was transferred to the Agriculture Department under Reorganization Plan No. 2. Also prominently mentioned for the post has been Secretary of Interior Ickes, whose choice was said to be contingent on willingness to step down from the Cabinet to take the job.

As Washington buzzed with speculation on who will head the works, security and lending agencies to be created under the orders effective July 1, appointment of Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, to be in charge of the new Federal loan agency alone appeared to be definite.

Jones, as head of the setup, it was said, would direct the President's plan to put idle men to work by financing construction of "self-liquidating" projects, when and if it is put into operation.

The name of Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, continued high on the list of those reported in line for Federal security administrator, but Altmeyer may prefer the six-year reappointment as Social Security Board chairman.

Other names figuring prominently in speculation on this post include those of Oscar L. Chapman, Undersecretary of the Interior, and Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. The name of Clarence Dykstra, University of Wisconsin head, also was being mentioned for either the works or the security agency post.

1,000 Luther Youths Open Session Tonight

Fellowship Program At U. of Md. Stadium Signals 5th Convention

Youth, 1,000 strong, will gather tonight at Ritchie Coliseum on the University of Maryland campus for the opening service of the fifth annual international convention of the Luther League of the American Lutheran Church.

STEGENMAN

To begin at 7:45 p. m., the fellowship program has been arranged by the Baltimore Federation of Luther Leagues, with the Rev. Alvin Matz, of Fullerton, Md., in charge.

The convention will be launched formally with a service of Holy Communion at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow, when the Rev. Henry E. Koch, Columbus, Ohio, executive secretary of the Luther League, will speak on "Under the Banners of Fellowship," the first of a series of talks on the general convention theme of "Under the Banners of the Church." The Rev. Herman G. Schultz, of Baltimore, will celebrate communion.

Following the opening business session, over which John D. Stegenman, Boyden, Iowa, International Luther League president, will preside, Gov. O'Conor of Maryland and President H. C. Byrd, of the university, will present greetings.

At 2 p. m., the Rev. H. C. Ziehe, San Antonio, Tex., chaplain of the convention, will lead the first devotional service and Dr. M. Reu, Dubuque, Iowa, acting president of the Warburg Lutheran Seminary, will speak.

Group discussions will be conducted by the Rev. T. K. Herbener, Oconomowoc, Wis., president of the Wisconsin District of the Luther League; Dr. Reu, and the Rev. Kurt Kerl, St. Paul, president of the Minnesota District of the Luther League.

Preceding a sightseeing tour Thursday afternoon, when Stegenman will place a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, the delegates will be greeted on the Capitol steps by Representative Henry O. Talle, of Iowa. Later they will attend a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, where Senator Shipstead, Minnesota, and Dr. Gould Wickey, of the United Lutheran Board of Education, will speak.

Olympians to Dine

Olympian Club of Washington will celebrate its sixth anniversary at a dinner at 7:30 tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel. Officers will be installed.

2 Library Officials to Oppose MacLeish Confirmation Today

Organized opposition to the nomination of Archibald MacLeish for Librarian of Congress will reach a climax today when two official representatives of the American Library Association will argue against Senate confirmation of the young American poet in closed sessions of the Senate Library Committee at 10 a. m.

Other developments yesterday in the tempest brewed by President Roosevelt's submission of MacLeish's nomination were:

The disclosure from independent sources that the A. L. A. favored the candidacy of Carl H. Milam, 54-year-old secretary of the organization.

Confirmation from informed quarters that Herbert Putnam, Congresional Librarian Emeritus now vacationing in Maine, had not been consulted as to his successor, and that the A. L. A.'s special committee set up last year to "advise the President" when Dr. Putnam's impending resignation was announced, had also been disregarded.

An attack on MacLeish—accused by members of Congress of being a Communist "fellow-traveler" in a Communist magazine, "New Masses," condemning him for his criticism of the Communist Party "united front" program.

The library officials to testify today are Harry M. Leidenberg, director of the New York City Public Library, who has recommended Milam's candidacy, and Harold F. Brigham, head of the Louisville (Ky.) Public Library. Milton J. Ferguson, president of the A. L. A., has already issued a public attack on MacLeish. He and other association officials would have appeared also, it was indicated, were they not in convention in San Francisco.

From the District Library Association, however, which is a branch of the national organization, there was favorable comment on the MacLeish nomination. Retiring president Ralph L. Thompson, of the Public Library, said that he thought it "a pretty good appointment."

"A man who has done everything MacLeish has done, who has gained the respect of hard-boiled reporters and journalists from his work with them at Harvard, and who can help run Fortune magazine and can be a war-time artillery officer is no slouch," he added.

Miss Elsie Rackstraw, of the Federal Reserve Library and new president of the District association, said, "The man has so many varied qualities it seems a pity to question only the fact that he is not a professional librarian."

Both Thompson and Miss Rackstraw emphasized they were speaking only for themselves and could not make a statement for the association members.

Local librarians opposed to MacLeish indicated that his nomination was a slap in the face of their profession, implying that they were only "cataloguers and indexers" and had not administrative ability. Another objection was that the President's choice would give impetus to politically-minded mayors throughout the country to name "politicians instead of professional experts" to head public libraries.

Staunch defense of the erstwhile Fortune editor and Harvard Nieman Fellowship curator "as an able administrator" came from two Farm Security Administration officials who worked with MacLeish on his poetic picture book, "Land of the Free." They were Roy Stryker, head of the FSA photographic section, and John R. Fleming, Bureau of Agricultural Economics information director.

Hate Only Threat U.S., Roberts Says

Providence, R. I., June 19.—Associate Justice Roberts of the United States Supreme Court said today unreasoning hatred constituted the only menace to the foundations of this country's government.

Race, class and political hatreds "have no place in a government of reason, which ours should be," Justice Roberts told an alumni meeting at Brown University, where earlier he had received an honorary degree.

Outlaw Olson Again Eludes Posse In Grim Chase

By the Associated Press.

Hayward, Wis., June 19.—A sharpshooting fugitive, slayer of two deputies, played a desperate game of hide-and-seek with a heavily armed posse in this north woods area today.

Once possemen thought they had cornered their quarry—35-year-old Ray Olson—when bloodhounds led them to a cabin near Moose Lake, but for the third time in two days he eluded his pursuers just as capture seemed imminent.

Wary of the quick-triggered marksman who picked off two of their number earlier in the five-day manhunt, the volunteer deputies poured machine gun and rifle fire and then tear gas shells into the cabin before approaching it.

When all was quiet, they found the frame building empty.

Peggy Townsend Fined $19 for Speeding, Parking

Miss Peggy Townsend, night club singer and 18-year-old debutante cherry blossom queen, yesterday paid fines of $19 in Traffic Court on a speed charge and three parking violations.

The fines for parking were a surprise to the pretty singer, who appeared in court on what she thought was only the speed charge. The police also had made out papers in the parking cases.

Miss Townsend pleaded guilty to speeding 40 miles on Connecticut avenue northwest June 12. She was fined $10 by Judge Hobart Newman. He imposed $3 fines in each of the charges of parking near fire hydrants.

The Keystone Automobile Club yesterday scored the Maryland State Roads Commission for its asserted failure to remedy week-end traffic congestion at the Bladensburg Peace Cross.

In a letter replying to the alleged contention of Maj. Ezra B. Whitman, State roads commission chairman, that the proposed Baltimore-Washington parkway will bring the needed improvements, the Keystone club said there was no possibility of the highway being completed within ten years.

Traffic Tangled By Light Failure In Downtown Area

Motorists and pedestrians were thrown into confusion yesterday when traffic signals at 14 downtown intersections went out following a short circuit in an underground cable at Fourteenth and L streets northwest. The lights were out more than five hours—from 9:15 a. m. until 2:30 p. m.

It was some time before "trouble shooters" from the Department of Vehicles and Traffic could locate the trouble. The odor of burning insulation was traced to a manhole in front of 1016 Fourteenth street and a small blaze had to be extinguished before restoration work could begin.

Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the police traffic division, sent 11 foot men and three motorcycle officers to handle traffic at the affected corners.

District Communists Name Executive Board

Col. Wilson Re-elected Columbia Alumni Head

Lieut. Col. Lester G. Wilson, consulting engineer, has been re-elected president of Columbia University Alumni Club of Washington. Vice presidents elected are Joseph W. Buran, Department of Justice attorney; Dr. Stephen Patrick Burke consulting engineer, and Alfred Anthony, statistician. Archie R. Sabin, Department of Agriculture statistician, was re-elected treasurer, and Herald L. Stendel, National Cathedral Association, secretary.

The executive council includes Dr. John S. Noffsinger, chairman; Maj. Edwin N. Lewis, Dr. Frederick L. Benton, Edwin L. Rogers and Judge Melvin H. Dalberg.

Britain Delays Retaliation Over Blockade

Offers Japan Final Chance to Clarify Intentions in China

By the Associated Press.

London, June 19.—Britain was reported by informed sources tonight to have decided to delay reprisals against Japan until Tokyo has been given a final chance to clarify its intentions regarding British interests in China.

This decision was said to have been reached by the foreign affairs committee of the cabinet after it had considered possible measures in retaliation for the Japanese blockade of the British concession at Tientsin.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the Commons talks were under way in London and Tokyo in an effort to arrive at a basis for settlement of the Tientsin issue.

"It is still hoped a local settlement may be possible," he said.

Halifax, Shigemitsu Confer

Foreign Secretary Halifax conferred with Japanese Ambassador Shigemitsu here and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador to Tokyo, called at the Japanese foreign office in Tokyo.

Japan was said to have been asked for an immediate and clear statement on demands by Japanese military spokesmen at Tientsin that Britain co-operate with the Japanese in establishing a "new order" in the Far East and end her "pro-Chiang Kai-Shek policies."

The British previously had asked an explanation but received no satisfactory reply.

In Touch with U. S., France

[The Post's special correspondent said Halifax also made a strong verbal protest against reported "indignities" offered British subjects. Rising anger felt in Britain, it was said, was further increased by taunting references to the situation in the German and Italian press.

Halifax suggested, International News Service reported, that the respective consuls in Tientsin be instructed to meet. The dispatch also reported Britain had sent a new alliance formula to Soviet Russia, in apparent hope the Anglo-French-Soviet entente could be completed before the China incident can develop into a full-bloomed crisis.—Editor's note.]

Chamberlain told Commons the original Japanese demand that British authorities at Tientsin hand over four alleged Chinese terrorists "had been confused by the introduction of the larger issues of general policy." It was these the British sought to "clarify."

"His Majesty's government cannot but believe that the Japanese government share their own desire not to widen the area of disagreement or to render more acute an already difficult situation," the prime minister said.

Chamberlain said Britain was maintaining "close touch with the French and American governments," and that the government would take "whatever steps may be necessary" to see that British subjects in Tientsin receive adequate food supplies.

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin (Tuesday), June 20.—A thousand volts of electricity isolated the British and French concessions today, threatening possible death to any who dared try to slip past Japanese sentries.

The Japanese installed high tension wires around the concessions late last night.

There were many reports—which officials could not confirm—of Chinese food venders being shot or bayonetted by Japanese guards at the concession boundaries.

Water Shortage Seen

A spokesman for the British said they were ready "to fight it out," but arranged that women and children should go on Wednesday to Chinwangtao and Peitaiho, coastal resorts, to relieve the demand for water and food.

Some fresh food was entering the concessions, but not enough. The danger of a shortage of water also developed.

A Japanese military spokesman today charged Britain was spreading falsely propaganda that all foreign rights were endangered by the blockade.

Japanese "courteously informed" United States officials of the blockade and were endeavoring to avoid inconveniences to Americans and other third power nationals, he declared, adding, however:

"If British propaganda is successful in bringing widespread economic reprisals against Japanese for the blockade, then local Japanese military authorities would consider such action automatically released them from obligations to protect foreign rights in China."

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, comdander in chief of the United States Asiatic Squadron, arrived from Peiping and entered the British concession without difficulties.

The American Asiatic Squadron, five destroyers, a tender, a minesweeper and oiler, arrived at Chefoo, which is under Japanese occupation.

Intimidation Charged

Shanghai (Tuesday), June 20 (AP). British authorities said today Japanese military leaders at Tientsin have sent letters to Chinese employes of the Municipal Council threatening to kill their families unless they resign.

Japanese Protest 'Forcible' British Cargo Landing

Shanghai (Tuesday), June 20 (INS).—Japanese authorities today lodged with British naval officials a stern protest against the alleged forcible landing of a British cargo at the Japanese-held Yangtze River port of Wuhu.

The Japanese charged that the British gunboat Scarab trained machine guns on Japanese soldiers on the Wuhu waterfront and in that manner landed a cargo in violation of an understanding that the British would submit lists of any merchandise they sought to deliver.

In connection with the Wuhu incident, it was learned that on June 9 a Japanese gunboat in the Haimen straights 45 miles from Shanghai fired six shells over the bows of the British gunboat Gnat.

D. C. Income Tax Hearing Set Today

ees held their first parley on the 1940 District supply bill.

New Conference Today

Only the less controversial items were reached, however, and the conferees set the next conference for today with the lump sum question still up in the air.

Morgan, who has stood with the Citizens Committee in its opposition to a low-base income tax, advised Senator King in a letter transmitting the requested bill that Congress should leave no doubt as to whether or not a District income tax should apply to members of Congress.

If Congress wishes to exempt members, it should say so as did the House, he wrote, and if it wishes to make the tax applicable, it should so state so that there could be no question in the minds of District tax enforcement agencies.

Would Raise $5,000,000

Morgan explained in his letter that he had amended the House bill "in conformity with your views as expressed in our telephone conversation."

Despite the change in rates and bases, Morgan estimated that the tax plan would raise approximately $3,000,000 from individual returns and $2,000,000 from corporations or a total of $5,000,000.

This increase in revenue, he explained, would be offset by the loss of $3,000,000 with repeal of the intangible personal property tax and $2,000,000 from failure to renew the business privilege levy.

Appeals Court Plugs Loophole In Crime Cases

Criminals lost one of their best defenses by an opinion of the Court of Appeals yesterday which prosecutors hailed as a cure for misuse of the statute of limitations.

The statute provides that prosecutions for certain crimes must begin within limited time which stops running while a man is a fugitive.

Louis E. McGowen, convicted of a forgery committed here January 23, 1934, told the appellate court he went to Virginia the next day, without meaning to run away, and that he was jailed there for three years. He claimed the statute prevented forgery prosecution when he returned.

Justice Edgerton ruled that leaving the District amounted to flight, whatever the fugitive may have intended. Assistant District Attorney Boyd said the decision probably meant the end of using the technicality to evade justice because it was unlikely a criminal could stay in the District three years without at some time crossing the border line into Maryland or Virginia and thus becoming a fugitive.

Senators Told Labor Board Favors C. I. O.

Manufacturers' Counsel Says Fair Play Violated, Seeds of Discord Sown

By the United Press.

John C. Gall, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, charged before the Senate Education and Labor Committee yesterday that the National Labor Relations Board has violated the elementary principles of fair play and "is intensely pro-C. I. O."

Gall testified on proposed amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations act while other witnesses were appearing before the House Labor Committee, which also is holding hearings on suggested changes. He urged that Congress outlaw the closed shop and check-off systems and amend the Wagner act so that employes, as well as employers, can be penalized for "unfair labor practices."

The Labor Board and its agents, he declared, "have been hostile to employers, to independent unions and to employes not affiliated with national unions; have violated many elementary principles of fair play, and have not only not contributed to a reduction in the volume of labor disputes, but have, in fact, sown the seeds of future discord."

President John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. recently charged that the N. A. M. drafted the amendments which the rival American Federation of Labor later sponsored as its own.

Gall said that the changes he proposes would not alter the fundamental bases of the act but would clarify and eliminate some of the Labor Board's discretionary power.

Witnesses on the House side were George Googe, Southern representative of the A. F. L.; W. B. Stonebraker, head of the Roanoke, Va., iron works and representative of the Southern Association of Iron Manufacturers, and F. L. Hoare, representing the Hoare Independent Employes, North Canton, Ohio.

Googe charged that in 1938 the board was the "organizing arm" of the C. I. O. in labor troubles at the Todd Johnson shipbuilding plant at New Orleans. Stonebraker said that amendments sponsored by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, "are a common sense" solution to labor-employer relations. Hoare complained that the act "is not protecting us in our rights."

Squalus' Fatal Dive Re-enacted

complaint against their commander's conduct, and one might have heard a pin drop as the Squalus' men stood at attention—silently and stiffly.

Only a few minutes later, Commander A. L. McKee, one of the sunken vessel's builders, was asked if it was possible for the submarine's signal light to show "closed" if the main induction valve was still open.

Naquin on Stand Today

There was a moment of thoughtful silence, then McKee answered slowly:

"Yes, if the mechanism was out of order."

And, finally, late this afternoon, there came a climax as Naquin followed the board of inquiry into the submarine Sculpin to re-enact the operations that preceded the Squalus' disastrous dive.

After the men climbed from the vessel the hearing was adjourned with announcement Naquin would testify tomorrow.

Members of the board indicated his testimony probably would serve as a basis for the investigators' questions at future sessions.

Naquin's re-enactment was only for the eyes and ears of the investigating officers and the Sculpin's crew.

Shortly after the officers filed aboard, a horn sounded twice—signal for a dive. Then, hatches slammed shut.

Inside the vessel, the Sculpin's crew stood at its stations, operating valves and controls, while investigating officers timed the operations with a stop-watch.

The Sculpin remained on the surface at her dock, but presumably Naquin went through the motions and gave the orders that he gave his own men aboard the Squalus as she executed her last dive.

The 300-foot sister submarine, first vessel to sight the Squalus' smoke bomb distress signal, was entered as "Exhibit 35"—one of the biggest court exhibits on record.

The day's session adjourned, Lieut. Comdr. W. D. Wilkin, commander of the Sculpin, took newsmen through his vessel.

They saw the gaping induction vent and the valve, which appeared possible of being controlled manually only by bursting one's arm beneath the tons of water that would pour through its opening if automatic controls failed.

They stood before a Christmas-tree-like control board, while Wilkin explained the myriad of lights—green "SH's" to show that valves and hatches were closed, and red "OP's" to signal they were open.

Days ago, the Squalus seaman who tended the valves on his vessel's fatal dive, told interviewers that light showed the induction valve was closed.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday introduced a resolution expressing Congressional appreciation of the Navy's heroic rescue of 33 members of the crew from the submarine Squalus, and authorizing war-time pensions to relatives of the 26 men lost. The measure also would authorize erection of plaques in memory of the lost sailors.

Meanwhile, salvage workers, in nine dives, lengthened a tunnel in the ocean mud beneath the Sqalus' stern, preparatory to looping heavy chain around the craft and attaching pontoons.

U. S. Is Concerned In China, Hull Says

Local representatives of this Government are being left free to take any steps considered ncessary for the welfare of Americans there, including their possible evacuation.

There was a feeling here that the Japanese activities at Tientsin foreshadowed similar movements against foreign concessions in other Chinese cities, if the Tientsin efforts should be successful, carrying out Japan's apparent determination to expel all Western influence and give her control over Asiatic affairs.

The "Asia for the Asiatics" doctrine promulgated by the Tokyo government has occasioned numerous stern notes of warning from this Government that American right cannot be wiped out by such a declaration.

On last October 27 there was made public the texts of three blunt communications to Japan in which the United States insisted on maintenance of the open door for American trade in China, discontinuance of Japanese trade monopolies in occupied territories, and noninterference with American rights.

Japan, on her part, has served notice that she intends to rule that section of the world through her dominated state of Manchukuo, and a puppet government in China. She has made clear, formally, her intention that other powers shall be permitted only those rights and privileges which do not conflict with Japanese interests.

It is against such contemplated domination and discretion that American officials have directed their diplomatic efforts.

Mrs. Meredith Hostess for 4-H Club Girls

Late Secretary of Agriculture Fostered Movement, She Says

The widow of the man who made ownership of prize hogs or cows by American farm youngsters a matter of his own responsibility received 100 girl delegates to the thirteenth National 4-H Club camp in a ballroom at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

She was Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, whose husband, Secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson Administration, loaned $350,000 of his own money to boys and girls on farms all over the United States and thereby fathered a movement of which the principal present-day manifestation is the 4-H Club.

Widow Explains Purpose

Mrs. Meredith explained the part her husband played in improving American farm production and why she considered him one of the spiritual fathers of the uniformed youngsters who lined the ballroom walls eating chicken salad, sandwiches and ice cream.

"Mr. Meredith began as far back as 1902," she explained. "The farm country in those days was full of scrub cattle and cross-bred hogs. Mr. Meredith felt that if he could encourage boys and girls on the farm to raise pure-bred stock they would shame their parents into doing the same thing.

"Through his farm publications (the Meredith Publishing Co., Des Moines, Iowa) he set up endowments from which youngsters could get loans, without interest, for purchase of thoroughbred stock."

Boys at Latvian Legation

Boy delegates to the camp were entertained yesterday at the Latvian Legation, where they were received by the Minister, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, who saw that they were fed Latvian cookies and candy and who told them of a farm youth movement in his country, patterned after Four-H clubs here.

It was the fourth year the legation has given the campers a party. Girl delegates will be entertained this afternoon.

Lathrop Beale and Benjamin Parran, of Woodrow Wilson High School, Washington, and Jessie Guard, Garrett County, Md., and Harry Synar, Oklahoma, conducted a panel discussion on "Leadership in a Democracy" yesterday morning.

Rain last night forced cancellation of an entertainment program in the Sylvan Theater.

Moral Courage Must Triumph, Says Silverstone

The history of the Jews is an affirmation that physical force must ultimately give way to moral courage, said Rabbi Harry Silverstone, of Tiferth Israel Congregation, speaking yesterday over WRC on the daily devotional hour.

"I am sure that I echo the hope of every local Christian, of every man and woman who is determined that, though darkness envelop the entire world, some spark of the spirit must be kept alive, that the Jew of today may have the moral courage of his ancestors and live to triumph over present dire savagery," he declared.

"It is not merely that the Jew might live, but that the soul of freedom, culture and spiritual ideals might live. The cry of humanity may escape our lips, the pain of mental travail may lead us in our extremity to ask whether God has forsaken us, but the sense of our significance for the world which will arise from present chaos must lead us to grit our teeth and live true to ourselves."

AAA Is Meeting With More Favor, County Agent Says

"You tell me whether it rained last week in Colorado and I'll tell you what the farmers are thinking out there."

That's the temper of rural America, as summed up by L. V. Toyne, county agent from Greeley, Colo. Toyne is a member of the executive committee of the National Association of County Agriculture Agents, which arrived here yesterday for a week's consultation with Government officials.

Closer to the grass roots of the farm problem than any other Government employes, the representatives of America's 3,800 county agents report that the AAA program "is meeting with more favor than ever before."

"Farming people are really sold on land-use planting," according to D. Z. McCormick, president of the association, from Morris County, Kans., "and the program is well stabilized this year."

Inventor Sues For Plane Patent

Claiming that he invented "a certain hovering airplane mechanism" which was new, Robert W. Davis, of Wauwatosa, Wis., yesterday asked District Court to compel Patent Commissioner Conway P. Coe to issue him a patent.

Davis, whose complaint was filed by Attorney Wilbert McInerny, said the application he filed March 27, 1937, was denied for lack of novelty, although his invention had not been patented, used or even written about in newspapers and magazines.

Editor Lays Good Government to Minority Balance

Buffalo, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—A Catholic editor tonight ascribed this Nation's "amazingly good government since Washington's time" to "the balance which exists among the minorities that make up the population."

"No mere coalition of minorities has ever prevailed here for long," said George N. Shuster, associate editor of the Commonweal, before a general session of the National Conference of Social Work.

From the same platform, United States Judge Florence E. Allen told the social workers traffic laws were better enforced in the United States than the Bill of Rights.

A. Delafield Smith, attorney for the Social Security Board at Washington, declared it impossible to discriminate against aliens in welfare work without striking at American citizens, because "the family knows no citizenship line."

Dr. Smith Hits 'Kowtowing' As Hazen Ends Her Hearings

After four weeks of pithy testimony, hearing on the abrupt dismissal of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith as head of the National Training School for Girls was ended yesterday afternoon.

Still dissatisfied with the amount of material she has put into the record, Dr. Smith asked that the Commissioners permit her to have three or four more days in which to file additional data. Commissioner Hazen said the hearing could not be extended further.

Denounces Whole System

Dr. Smith had asked that her dismissal with prejudice be changed to a "resignation without prejudice" and asserted that, whatever the Commissioners decided, she would devote her future to forwarding legislation to have the school placed under supervision of the Board of Education rather than the Board of Public Welfare.

Yesterday she redenied all charges witnesses had made against her; declared the head of the training school is expected to be a "menial" rather than a person with ideas; accused the Board of Public Welfare of being uninformed about school happenings, and berated the "system of subservience and kowtowing that is required here in the Capital of the Nation."

She declared the morale of the staff with which she had to work was the worst she ever saw, asserted not a member of it was qualified to teach in District public schools, and said she had to make a "nuisance of myself at the District Building" to get anything done. Elwood Street, former director of public welfare, reprimanded her, she declared, "for even having written a letter to Commissioner Hazen" and thus overstepping the "kowtowing" rules binding public procedure in the District.

Praises Courage, Ideas

One of her chief complaints against the hearing as held, she declared, was that Street was not called as a witness. Another was her inability to get into the record "facts from school books to show that conditions were as bad before I went there as after I arrived."

Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, who prosecuted the case, praised Dr. Smith's personality, courage and ideas, but not her administrative ability in summing up the case and asking the Commissioners to let her dismissal stand.

Squawk Of The Century

Really, to judge by the appalling dither into which the London press has been working itself over the defeat of Sydney Wooderson in last Saturday's race at Princeton, you might think that Mr. Blaine Rideout had wrapped the poor fellow up in a high voltage wire or had slipped one of those Fenian bombs inside his running trunks.

The British correspondents who came over to report the race have gone completely over the deep-end. Yesterday the word "foul" was echoing mournfully through all the corridors of Fleet street.

To be sure it was a bit unfortunate that Messrs. Rideout and Wooderson should have had that gentle collision when they took the last curve around the Palmer Stadium. Sydney was thrown off his stride. But the opinion of the most competent witnesses seems to be that had the accident not occurred, Sydney would, at best, have finished fourth instead of last in a field of five. And there are those (including Mr. Rideout) who say it was not so much a case of the American bearing in on Sydney—who had been taking the turns pretty wide—but of Sydney bearing out on the Americans. But either way it would be evidence of no more malignant intention than to win a foot race.

Nor does the fact that his showing in the race was such a sorry anti-climax to the elaborate edifice of publicity he has received necessarily indicate that Sydney isn't still the greatest miler in history. Any number of things more plausible than the allegation of a foul could be advanced to explain his unimpressive showing. For instance, there is the fact that he was running on an unfamiliar type of track in an unfamiliar type of contest and in weather that had the hardiest natives begging for mercy. Anybody who could run a mile in any time last Saturday is, ipso facto, a superman.

Perhaps the only thing the race proves is, what has been proved over and over again by the Olympic games and the Davis Cup matches, namely, that international sports can be almost as great stumbling blocks to international concord as tariff walls and armament races. But somehow it is difficult to believe that if the British Empire is fated to go the way of Ninevah and Tyre it will be because Sydney Wooderson lost the race at Princeton.

Silver Casket

When Genghis Khan died, 712 years ago, his body was placed in a silver casket and buried at Etshinhuro, in his native Mongolia. There it remained undisturbed until the other day when, amid the greatest secrecy, the Chinese transferred the casket to some undisclosed point in westernmost China.

Of China's many conquerors, few ruled over a wider area than did Genghis, "the perfect warrior." With fire and sword he had, in a few brief decades, made himself master of a domain extending from the China Sea to the Dnieper. But none left fewer traces of his rule.

In less than a century and a half after Genghis' death, the great Mongol empire he had founded, the wonder and admiration of such men as Marco Polo, had been broken up. Once again China demonstrated her tremendous assimilative capacity by quickly absorbing her conquerors. Indeed, even in the days of Kublai Khan, greatest of Genghis' successors, it could in truth be said that it was no longer the Mongols who ruled China but China which ruled the Mongols. And for seven centuries that remained true.

The land of the Mongols is now divided between three nations. Outer Mongolia is a puppet state whose strings are pulled by Moscow. Inner Mongolia is dominated by the Japanese who dream of creating a Mongukuo as a companion buffer to Manchukuo. But there is still a part of the ancestral lands of Genghis which remains under Chinese sovereignty.

The Chinese are determined not to relinquish this stretch of Mongol area. For this reason they decided to remove the ashes of Genghis Khan, who remains a great Mongol hero, to a place far removed from Japan's invading armies. They are fearful that should the Japanese lay their hands on the coffin of the Mongol conqueror, the sarcophagus and its remains would be used as a rallying point for a Japanese-sponsored Mongol national movement which might encompass the further disintegration of China.

In the struggle raging in the Far East, it is not only bullets and airplanes that count. There are also powerful symbols. One of these is the silver coffin that contains the mortal remains of Genghis Khan. For if Genghis left nothing but a memory that memory is not without importance and power in that corner of Asia where Chinese, Japanese and Russian frontiers meet.

Politics And Finance

Announcement that the Export-Import Bank has agreed to advance credits to Paraguay to finance road construction in that country again raises a question that was asked when the Brazilian credit agreement was made public last March.

That question is, how far the Administration intends to go in providing capital and credit for South American countries that, to put it bluntly, are poor credit risks. At the present time approximately $357,000,000 of dollar bonds issued by Brazil alone are in default. And, taking Latin America as a whole, about $1,350,000,000 of dollar bonds are either in partial or in complete default.

It has not been the policy of this Government in the past to undertake to act as bill collector for our private investors. Nor has the Department of State looked with favor upon suggestions that trade agreements should be linked with private debt settlements.

However, when the agreement with Brazil was made it was understood that the American holders of Brazilian bonds would shortly be presented with a plan for resumption of payments on issues in default. Now grumblings are coming from the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council because so far no move has been made toward fulfillment of these promises. Meantime the Export-Import Bank has advanced credits to "unfreeze" balances due to American exporters in Brazil.

It is not the short-term credits, but the long-term credits used to finance capital improvements that present the greatest problem. Before the Government of the United States devotes $50,000,000 of its gold to developing the industries of Brazil, or agrees to assist Paraguay to improve her internal transportation facilities, Congress certainly should be consulted. For this is only a beginning. Other countries of South America are now pressing for loans. And the cordiality with which approaches are welcomed by our officials literally invites a stampede for funds.

It is undeniably true that our export trade in the years before the depression was greatly stimulated by the liberal loans placed abroad by Americans. But many of the latter are still ruefully contemplating their losses, while the exporters have forgotten their gains. There is no prospect of early resumption of foreign lending on a substantial scale by our disillusioned investors in most of the Latin-American republics. So when the Government embarks upon a policy of supplying capital to Latin America the motive of such an innovation seems primarily political.

Even if such loans are actually valuable in strengthening political ties, the policy is dubious. The fact that the Government of the United States has in the past kept its hands off private debt settlements between American and foreign investors has enabled us to avoid friction with a large number of foreign countries. Consider, for instance, the difference between our feeling toward nations in default on private debt account and those which, like the war-debtor nations, have failed to pay the Government. In the one case, we accept the situation philosophically. In the other case, Congress blusters, and passes the Johnson act, banning loans to governments in default on the war debt.

Before we go much further in supplying capital to the undeveloped countries of Latin America it would be well not only to weigh the risks of loss, but also to consider more carefully the possibility of political friction resulting from intergovernmental debts. The friendships bought by advancing loans are built upon very shaky foundations.

Important Omission

At Danzig on Sunday, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister, spoke cryptically of the future of the Free City.

Danzig, he said, is German and "no amount of diplomacy or power politics can change this fact." On this point there can be no argument. Even the hated Treaty of Versailles recognized the German character of Danzig. While making that Baltic seaport part of the Polish customs union and placing its foreign relations in Poland's hands, the peace treaty gave full autonomy to the inhabitants of Danzig. Nor has Poland or any other nation sought in any way to curb that autonomy.

Why, then, did Dr. Goebbels go out of his way to underline the obvious? The presumption is that the purpose of his speech, as of his presence in the Free City, was to keep the Danzig pot boiling. Germany is not yet ready to repeat in Danzig the kind of aggressive action taken in Czecho-Slovakia and Memel. An attempt to do so at this moment would probably meet with the resistance of Poland and, present diplomatic commitments being what they are, plunge Europe into war. It is doubtful if Hitler wants that kind of a war.

Thus Dr. Goebbels had to content himself with telling the Danzig Nazis to bide their time. He encouraged them with the pledge that "the German people in its compactness" stands by them. He assured them that "in these hard and tension-filled times" they could depend on Adolf Hitler. And with Reich and Fuehrer behind them, he added, they need have no anxiety for the "fate of your city or of the so-called Free State."

He was careful, however, to leave obscure just what Germany plans to do regarding Danzig and when it proposes to act. The omission is important. The Nazi press, even while crying to high heaven about "encirclement," has also cast scorn on the efforts of Great Britain and France to create an antiaggression bloc.

Actually the rulers of the Third Reich are not minimizing the change that has come over the European situation during the past two months. They are hopeful that this change will not be permanent and they are encouraged in that belief by what is going on in Tientsin and by the prolonged deadlock in the Anglo-Russian negotiations for an alliance. Remote as Tientsin and Danzig are from each other they are focal points of a common crisis.

Limited Tax Relief

The tax bill just passed by the House extends the so-called nuisance taxes due to expire at the end of the current fiscal year. It also provides a restricted measure of tax relief for business.

The tax revision proposals are good as far as they go, but they obviously do not go far enough, as the minority members of the Ways and Means Committee indicate. A number of tax "irritants" are eliminated, however, notably the remnants of the undistributed profits tax. And corporations are permitted to carry over their net operating business losses for a period of two years in computing taxable incomes—a provision especially helpful to concerns with fluctuating incomes.

Another important provision is that enabling corporations with unsound capital structures to buy in their obligations at less than face value without incurring a tax liability. The method of handling long-term corporate gains and losses for purposes of income taxation is likewise changed for the better. There are also a number of highly technical provisions designed to clear up obscurities concerning tax liabilities on certain types of stock dividends, and the status of debts in case of corporate reorganizations.

The bill does not attempt, however, to provide the comprehensive kind of tax relief that is really needed to stimulate investment activity and encourage business expansion. The new 18 per cent flat rate levy imposed upon corporations with incomes above $25,000 is extremely high. Indeed, no attempt is made to lower the total tax burden on corporate incomes under the House bill. The intention is to provide for a more equitable and less irritating system of corporate taxation, without substantial loss of revenue.

No effort whatever is made to improve the system of personal income taxation with a view to stimulating business activity. Yet the methods employed in handling individual capital gains and losses are a major deterrent to enterprise, diverting capital from industrial employment into tax-exempt securities and comparatively riskless undertakings. High individual surtaxes also discourage the kind of investment activity that leads to industrial expansion and opens up new fields of industry.

The Committee on Ways and Means is fully aware of the restricted and inadequate nature of the proposed revisions, but pleads lack of time as an excuse for not doing a more complete job. That, at least, holds out hope that Congress may eventually have the courage to effect a comprehensive reform of our system of Federal taxation instead of merely patching up the structure.

"In the make-up of the universe, space is an important factor," declares a scientist. It would be rather inconvenient not to have anywhere to put anything.

The years have got you down when it takes you longer to rest up than it did to get tired.

We have two world fairs this year, but no fair world.

Hilarious Hats

From the Commentator

The current craze for minaret millinery has forced movie theater owners to dust off their "Ladies: Please Remove Your Hats" signs. But there are occasions when the admonition may be disregarded. At a recent showing of a Martha Raye comedy a sweet young thing walked into the theater, balancing on her head a creation that looked like a lateen-rigged sloop in full sail. She sat down directly in front of a small, bespectacled gentleman who, after ducking hither and thither in a vain attempt to see the screen, tapped her on the shoulder, and asked her if she would please remove her hat. Reluctantly she did so.

A few minutes later he tapped her on the shoulder a second time. "Pardon me," he said apologetically, "but would you mind putting your hat on again?"

"Why?" coldly demanded the sweet young thing.

"The picture is funny," he explained, "but your hat is funnier."

Mr. Fish's Criticisms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Hamilton Fish's criticism of The Washington Post editorial which was commended by President Roosevelt is characteristic of Mr. Fish. In his effort to occupy his present role of pacifist successfully he leans over backward and takes a most illogical and irrational position.

It ought not to require extensive proof to convince the average intelligent person that a "preponderant show of force" by the democratic and liberal governments to ward off aggression from the Fascist dictatorships is not an invitation to war. The policeman who patrols the street to maintain order and who is armed with a club and a revolver is not inviting the lawbreaker to combat. Rather, he represents organized government's determination to preserve the peace, and is a warning that those who commit crimes will be punished. For those who respect the rights of others he is an assurance of protection and safety.

The armed and well-prepared democracies of the world are in much the same relationship to other nations. Their military and naval equipment are not for aggression but for defense in case of attack from the dictatorships. The peaceful and friendly governments which mind their own business have nothing to fear from such armed preparedness. The rulers who are inflamed by an insane desire to subjugate the rest of mankind and who are the representatives of ruthless reactionary and imperialist interests can wisely conclude that it will not be salubrious for them to molest other peoples.

Mr. Fish would not want to abolish police protection on the theory that it induces vicious elements to violent deeds. He knows such a claim would be nonsense. He ought to know that his attacks on The Post editorial and on President Roosevelt are equally nonsensical. He should be fair and frank enough to admit that the policy of the President is the only practical and effective policy in a period when unbridled tyranny and terrorism flourish in Europe and are constantly encroaching upon other lands.

This is no time for biased partisan criticisms and misrepresentations of the Chief Executive. Mr. Fish would appear in a far more creditable light if he were to acknowledge the soundness of Mr. Roosevelt's view and to support it. But that, of course, is not to be expected.

Is The Atlantic A "Moat Defensive?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most astounding features of the present widespread opposition to "war" and, in particular, to any co-operation with any European nation or nations in case of conflict there, is the almost general disregard toward the teachings of history, our own as well as that of mankind as a whole! Instead of consulting human history and so discovering what to expect in accordance with past experiences and developments, we seem unable to expand our vision beyond what we want—or don't want! Since we don't want war it is assumed that such nations as are warlike and determined to "expand" by conquest or through the surrender of their victims won't want any part of this vast, resourceful, and but thinly peopled Western Hemisphere!

To assert, as is being done by our self-anesthetized isolationists, e. g. Mr. Hoover, that our hemisphere or our own territory alone is beyond the reach of either European or Asiatic enemy fleets and armies because oceans separate the Americas from the Old World continents is truly a marvelous exhibit of historical ignorance on the part of presumably educated Americans. When ships were little more than fishing boats Norse seamen found the Atlantic entirely possible; with the discovery of America by Columbus crossing the Atlantic became a fashionable pastime with marine adventurers or national expeditions. The British and French governments did not hesitate to send to our shores fleets and armies during their American conflicts until these ended on the Heights of Abraham.

During our struggle for independence Britain was quite able to transport her soldiers by thousands across the Atlantic, as, later, did our ally, France, whose fleet and army at Yorktown made possible the capture of that city and Cornwallis. And in the War of 1812-14, which followed our illuminating but hardly encouraging policy of absolute neutrality, Britain managed to transport enough soldiers to invade our shores and to cross our boundary from north, east and south—as the noble Marathonic race at Bladensburg and the burning of Washington might well emphasize!

The invasion of Mexico by Napoleon III when we were engaged in our grand family rucus also showed how "passable" the Atlantic is to Europe's fleets, as did also the arrival of Cervera in Santiago, and the performances of German subs during the World War!

How absurd to talk of the Atlantic being an "impregnable protective moat!" The actual protection for many a long decade has been not the ocean but the friendly attitude of one or the other or both the leading naval powers in Europe. So long as Britain and France retain naval supremacy in Europe America is practically assured against any formidable attack from that quarter. But should these powers be crushed in a war with the dictators (and thus become satellites of these open enemies of American democracy—not an impossibility, as the World War demonstrated) would this Atlantic prove any better protection than it did in 1814?

No; our safety would depend wholly on our own armaments, and since these, at least the naval part, would be charged with a guardianship of the enormous stretch of coast from Greenland to Cape Horn (i. e. unless our anti-war, safety-first generation throws the Monroe Doctrine onto the dump of "repudiated" engagements) how could we save our own seacoasts from bombings or bombardments or prevent the enemy from obtaining a useful foothold in South America? Especially since the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis provides for joint attacks across both oceans?

So whatever our Pharisaic isolationists may say against co-operating with the—to them—British and French Samaritans common sense suggests that our wisest, least expensive or dangerous, in the long run, policy would be to support Europe's naval powers in any conflict with the Hitler-Mussolini-Tokyo combination. By so doing we maintain an invaluable protective screen of warships for the Americas, we fight our battles, if fight we must, not in our front yard but in territory far removed from our cities and homes. That would be making use of Europe as well as serving her. LARRY LAWSON.

Memoir Of Joe Campbell

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested in the letter in the June 15 issue of your splendid paper by Mr. Frank B. Lord in reference to the establishment of a library at Cooperstown, N. Y., wherein all historical documents relating to the great game of baseball are to be filed.

Mr. Lord speaks of a former baseball writer of your paper, Mr. Joseph Campbell, who in his stories of the game invented more adjectives than any other sports writer. At the time Joe Campbell was doing his work for The Post I was often alongside him in the press box, being then employed by President Nick Young of the National League as its official reporter. I was also a special correspondent of the Boston Herald, then the only paper in America carrying daily box scores of National League games played in the various cities. That was before the Associated Press took up such work. I can attest that Joe Campbell's stories of the game have never been equaled by the great crowd of newspaper writers that have followed him, and hence it's a pity that none of his witty screeds has found a place in Cooperstown.

I had a wonderful scrapbook of baseball kept by my father before the National League was organized, as well as after it came into existence. This I presented to President John A. Heydler of the National League. Because it contained many historical facts about early baseball, Mr. Heydler asked my permission to have it placed at Cooperstown. I gave my consent.

I am sorry that some other valuable items I gave Mr. Young have not been found. These also belong in the files of the new library. But I greatly regret that some of Joe Campbell's stories are not in the baseball archives.

Mr. Sullivan Is Rebuked

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to Mark Sullivan's column in The Post of June 15, headed "Democrats Divided."

It would be interesting to know by what method Republicans, such as Mark Sullivan, or former Democrats, such as Frank Kent, have access to the innermost thoughts and private conversations of Democratic leaders who have remained loyal to their party and its chosen leader. Mr. Sullivan also is guilty of statements about the late Senator Robinson that have been refuted by members of the Senator's family and by all of his intimates. Mr. Robinson's sincerity was apparently not doubted by the Republican snipers at the time he demolished Al Smith's Liberty League dinner speech, opened the 1936 Democratic convention, or fought to liberalize the Supreme Court; to judge by the sputtering answers Republican editors made him at those times.

The overwhelming majority of Democrats is solidly back of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the greatest President America has ever had; even the Democratic leaders found in opposition to him would infinitely prefer him to what would appear to be the only alternative Administration by such forces of reaction as Mark Sullivan speaks for.

To an overwhelming majority of people who give any consideration to the outpourings of Messrs. Sullivan, Kent, Girdler et al. must inevitably come words spoken of another much maligned Democratic President, "We love him for the enemies he has made."

It is doubtful if a party under such tuition can again carry even Maine and Vermont. S. B. MOSS.

The Post Impressionist

Thirty

HE WAS several fathoms beneath the surface when it happened. No response came to his signal, so he drew air from a reserve tank, then climbed the rope, hand over hand, discarding impedimenta from the recently devised diving suit as he rose. Dead men littered the deck of the tender. They had been alive a half hour before.

She was making a daring flight into the stratosphere when it happened. She came down to an airport, where no one welcomed or served her. She thought them asleep, lying in grotesque postures. They were not.

The man from the sea and the woman from space met a few days later, and the meeting served to prolong sanity for him, a naturalist who had been delving for mysteries of the deep; and for her, a scholar, who had sought relaxation as an aviatrix.

A poisonous gas of high volatility had swept the earth. They knew it had swept the earth because no response came over a radio, tuned in for long, then short waves. They knew it because no ships were entering the seaport which they viewed from a hill; no boats were moving under power on the surface of the bay.

A luxury liner careened crazily as it bumped against the ruins of a pier. Other vessels swung, bows-on, sterns-on, or broadsides, upon objects which obstructed current-directed progress. Ferry boats were huge, inanimate water spiders, drifting; tugs, caught in eddies, swirled top-like or collided with other flotsam, then shunted off. An up-to-date destroyer, taking water through a hole-punctured hull, was sinking inch by inch.

For them to have approached nearer this scene of devastation would have been impossible. Man, by the millions crowded there, was returning to the dust from which he had been created.

"Even the buzzards are gone," he said. "What a feast they would have had!"

Gone also were the corrupt governments of many municipalities. No one left to be corrupted.

Gone were rackets and racketeers.

Gone were murderers, thieves, prostitutes.

Gone were the self-elected rulers of totalitarian states, and gone were their dupes.

Gone were the democracies and the peoples' misrepresentatives in legislative assemblies.

Gone were emperors, kings, princes, dukes, earls; gone were nobles of the marquis rank; also gone were viscounts, barons and country squires.

"Shall we attempt to reproduce our species?" he asked.

"Imitate Adam and Eve? No! They begat a fratricide. Since then—crucifixions, inquisitions, autos-da-fe, tortures, eye-gougings, tongue-twistings, bone-crackings, disembowelings, impalements, greased bodies on fire, keelhaulings, spread-eagleings, pogroms, liquidations, assassinations, guillotinings, garrotings, hangings, electric-chair concussions, lethal-chamber suffocations; meanwhile the crescendo of slaughter with stones, arrows, spears, axes, tomahawks, guns, torpedoes, bombs.

"Man, not yet satiated, not even satisfied with all these blood-lettings, screams of agony and tears of despair, was preparing a war which should be world-wide. The Creator, convinced that no person desired another person to live, granted that wish."

"Then the world will remain depopulated?"

"Save for those things and creatures like them." She pointed to a low mound of sand. "Ants, beneath ground cover, escaped the gas. They, their kin, and things which crawl will dominate the land . . ."

"Look!" he exclaimed.

In the distance a thin column of water, tinted with rainbow hues, rose against the setting sun.

"There is a totalitarian ruler," he said. "Whales will govern the oceans. They will devour other creatures, which will be so much better than sending them against an enemy, to suffer lingering deaths."

"Yes," she said. "Even whales have been more merciful than humans. When insects populate the land and fish the water, then what?"

"The surface of the earth eventually will collapse. It has been made a honeycomb structure by man, the butcher, who also has been a thief. He has stolen from Nature the oil, gas, coal and other minerals which supported the crust."

"After that?"

"The immutable law of gravitation will determine whether Earth shall become a dead body and swing in an orbit for eons, or burst into particles, hurling through space."

"Shall we continue on with the insects?" she asked.

"No. The fish are clean."

Hand in hand they sought the beach and a friendly wave took them into its pure embrace.

Sir Loin

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: King Charles II of England knighted a loin of beef which he found peculiarly succulent, tasteful and sustaining, striking the beef with his royal sword and pronouncing, "Rise, Sir Loin!" whence we, to this day, say Sir-Loin Steak.

King George having been captivated by the hot dog, what more gracious for His Gracious Majesty than to give the accolade to this flower of American cuisineries? Autographed photographs and marble inkstands please a few higher-ups, but King George would touch the great heart (and the rather durable gizzard, too) of the American commonwealth, if he included this tid-bit in the next citation.

I must say I rather fancy Sir Eustace Hotdog, Baron Coney.

Government Investing

By Mark Sullivan

A Contribution

SECRETARY OF the Treasury Henry Morgenthau is an honest person. In private life he would never mislead for personal advantage. In his public capacity, he has a reputation for intellectual integrity. His honesty is associated with simplicity, almost naivete. He is not "smart." It is almost impossible to think of him practicing ingenious cleverness in order to gain advantage. Yet Mr. Morgenthau, testifying before a House committee, to recommend changes in the social security act, told the committee—I quote from the record:

"To improve public understanding of the purposes for which the funds are collected, I recommend that the taxes (collected for social security) be termed 'contributions' levied under the Government taxing power. This terminology has always been used in the railroad unemployment insurance act."

So, what is now called a "tax" is in future to be called a "contribution." And the change is made, so Mr. Morgenthau says, "to improve public understanding."

But is that the effect? Is it not rather to make the public think that a tax is something different from a tax? On the theory that a tax by another name—that is, if called a "contribution"—would be paid more cheerfully?

Payments under the social security law are taxes. They are taxes because they are paid under compulsion—if you don't pay them, you go to jail or are fined. A "contribution," on the other hand, is something you give voluntarily. You make contributions to churches, to the Red Cross and the like. You don't make contributions to the Government—you pay taxes to it. "Tax" is the name for what is paid to Government by compulsion. "Contribution" is the name for what you give voluntarily to churches and other institutions.

Social Security Payments Are Tax

THE SOCIAL security payments are a tax. More than that, they are an income tax. They are an income tax on workers, on small earners. The social security act itself describes part of them as "income tax on employes." And in the ordinary income tax blanks, which everybody filled out last March, is a sentence reading: "Tax . . . paid under . . . social security act . . . is a Federal income tax."

Mr. Morgenthau's displacement of the unpleasant word "tax" by the agreeable word "contribution" is probably the casual action of an individual. But in some cases the New Deal practices a deliberate technique with words, a conscious art, organized, planned and directed.

A little while ago Mr. Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, found and gave to the public a typewritten document which had been composed for a group of New Dealers, for their guidance in conducting the hearings of the Temporary National Economic Committee. In this document words were divided into "good" words, which please the public; and "bad" words, which displease. Said the document: "Always remember that one context pleases the layman and the other displeases him."

"Debt," said the document, "is a very bad word . . . It is important to keep debt and investment closely associated throughout these hearings. Otherwise you are going to get stump speeches on the horrors of Government debt, and the sublimities of private investment. It is equally in order to talk about the virtues of Government investment and dangers of private debt . . . Spending is a 'bad' word. Avoid it like a copperhead."

Condemned Plan In 1932 Campaign

IN THE LIGHT of this ingenious cleverness with words, it is interesting to observe that President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress last January 4, used the term "Government investing." I think it was the first time he had used this term in any of his messages, though research would be necessary to be sure about this. That no preceding President ever used it, is safe to say, for the phrase is new. I doubt if it was ever used before the New Deal.

"Government investing" Mr. Roosevelt condoned and commended. But what he now commends as "Government investing" is the same thing which, in 1932, when attacking President Hoover, he powerfully condemned as "Government spending" and "Government debt."

This art with words is not new. Talleyrand knew it, and said: "An important art of politicians is to find new words for institutions which, under their old names, have become odious to the public."

One of the most ancient saws is that which says: "Let me write the ballads of a nation, and I care not who writes its laws." A modern variation might say: "Let me write the definitions of terms used in government, and I can change the government without the people being aware of it."

But one would like to think of words coming out of the Government as one thinks of coins minted by the Government, as something beyond question. The citizen ought not to feel, about a Government coin or a Government word, that he had better turn it over and examine the reverse of it, and drop it on the counter to test the ring of it.

House District Committee Reports Bill To Take 1,600 Taxis Off Streets of Capital

Measure Would Limit Cabs to 500 for Each 100,000 Residents

The House District Committee yesterday reported out a bill to authorize the Public Utilities Commission to reduce the number of cabs operating in Washington to a maximum of 500 for each 100,000 residents.

Under the latest Census Bureau estimate this measure, if enacted into law, would place a limitation of 3,000 on the number of licensed cabs, or about 1,800 fewer than are now operating.

Licensed operators would be reduced to 4,500 or 750 to 100,000 population or majority fraction thereof.

The measure, which has twice before been rejected by the House, faces another fight when it is called up in the House next Monday.

Representative Dirksen, ranking minority member of the committee, voted against it and announced he will oppose it on the floor on the ground that it would bar by law a man from "trying to make a living."

Sponsored by Representative McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, the bill was amended upon motion of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, after a prolonged discussion.

Nichols' amendments increase the maximum number of cab licenses from 400 to 500 per 100,000 population and the number of licensed drivers from 600 to 750. Nichols explained, however, that the commission would be empowered to reduce the number far below that figure if it desired.

The curtailment would be effected by a gradual process of refusing to issue new licenses for cabs or operators as they expire, until the maximum number is reached.

The District Committee, in executive session, also reported out the Nichols bill to regulate the practice of optometry in Washington. The bill would prohibit the practice in department stores and would strict advertising.

Two bills that have passed the Senate and two measures just submitted by the Commissioners were approved. The Senate bills extend the auto registration date to April 1 and authorize hospitals to obtain liens on monetary settlements in traffic damage cases in which they treat the patient.

The two new measures authorize the Commissioners to settle minor claims without special legislation in each case and enable police of adjacent States to pursue and arrest in the District persons suspected of committing felonies in the States.

Life's Darkest Moment

House Passes Tax Appeasement Bill

of the $635,000,000 collected from both nuisance and emergency postage rates. Congress he said, could offset this loss by cuts in spending. He urged that the new corporate rates be applied to this year's earnings. One by one, his amendments were shouted down.

All other non-committee amendments went the same route or were ruled out on points of order. Proposals tossed overboard included a one-year limitation on the nuisance tax extension, a plan to tap income from tax-exempt securities by including it in gross income for rate-making purposes and an increase in the credit for charitable contributions from 15 to 25 per cent.

3-Year Fight

Passage of the bill climaxed a 3-year fight for elimination of the undivided profits levy and other business tax "deterrents." All but a 2½ per cent vestige of the profits tax was eliminated last session and that bill became law without the President's signature.

Early this year Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, in co-operation with Doughton, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Undersecretary Hanes sought further modifications. After a long series of White House conferences, virtual agreement was reached on the limited revisions approved yesterday. Harrison is expected to open Senate committee consideration immediately and rush the bill to the Senate floor next week, probably in advance of social security and relief bills.

Business tax "concessions" made in the bill include permission for corporations to carry over their net operating business losses for two years and to increase the tax valuation of their capital stock this year and next year, to ease excess profits taxation. The present law permits no stock revaluation until 1941.

The present $2,000 limitation on capital losses that may be applied as an offset to profits would be removed. Losses would be allowed in full on assets held for more than 18 months.

Business Abroad Facilitated

Corporations in unsound financial condition would be permitted to redeem their obligations at less than face value without being taxed on the difference between par value and the redemption price.

Banks, insurance companies, China trade act corporations and those in United States possessions would be taxed like other corporations, as would foreign corporations engaged in business with the United States and mutual investment companies. Foreign corporations not in trade with the United States but receiving income from it would continue to be taxed at 15 per cent upon fixed income and 10 per cent on dividends.

Credit allowances for taxes paid by American corporations in foreign governments would be liberalized to make it less difficult for American firms to transact business abroad. The Federal lien law would be revised to make the seller, rather than the purchaser of negotiable securities, liable for liens against securities.

Milk Bill Vote Called Invalid

and that hearings had been held on it during sessions of the House without permission of the House.

Amended to apply the U. S. Public Health Service code to the District in lieu of its own public health regulations, the Schulte bill at the same time carries a confusing provision which gives the District health officer authority either to make inspections of any dairy farm which wishes to ship milk into Washington or to waive the right.

Permits Three Grades

Section 2 of the bill provides that "all inspections of dairy farms and dairy distributing plants, no matter where located, shall be made by the health officer of the District of Columbia, or his duly authorized agents or deputies; provided, however, that if the health officer of the District of Columbia elects to waive inspection under the provisions of Section 11 of the 1939 edition of the U. S. Public Health Service milk ordinance, then inspection by said health officer and his deputies shall not be required."

It was a debatable question yesterday whether the health officer could be compelled to accept the inspections of State or county officials if he is unable to send District inspectors to any farm in the United States that applies for a permit.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland already has stated he would not be willing to permit the importation of milk for fluid consumption that comes from a source not approved by his own agents.

Representative Smith, a member of the House Rules Committee, said he never before had seen a piece of legislation which is based on a code that is not a law itself or is not written into the proposed legislation.

The Shulte bill apparently would permit sale in the District of three grades of milk instead of the single Grade A now allowed.

The three grades which could be sold are "Grade A Pasteurized," "Certified Milk—Pasteurized," and "Certified Milk—Raw." The measure prohibits sale of raw milk that is not certified.

All of the District 1925 milk control act and the Health Department's regulations based on the law would be repealed by the Shulte bill.

Ice Cream Not Affected

The production, transportation, processing, handling and sale of milk and auxiliary products in the Capital would be regulated in accordance with the 1939 edition of the United States Public Health Service code. Presumably, every time the code is amended the District act would have to be amended.

Importation of cream for manufacture of ice cream, as now allowed by Section 4 of the 1925 act, would not be affected by the Public Health Service code, under provisions of the Schulte bill.

The four members who voted with Bates against the Schulte bill were Representatives Byron (Democrat, of Maryland; Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio; Sandager (Republican), of Rhode Island, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Hunter said he voted against the bill partly because of the "star chamber proceedings" used by the committee in reporting out the measure.

Church Demands Fallon Resign

Acting Comptroller General, R. N. Elliott, who asked "whether there was a commingling of private and public business," inasmuch as GAO investigators said Fallon owned a summer home at Swampscott and a permanent residence at Forest Hills, N. Y. GAO investigations also alleged that Fallon had sent telegrams from Marblehead, Mass., when his travel vouchers showed him in Boston.

T. D. Webb, vice chairman of the FHLBB, replied to the Comptroller General, the records revealed, that all of the challenged trips had been thoroughly examined and "that in every case the expense incurred . . . was pursuant to travel undertaken solely because of necessary official business."

Webb added that Fallon's work necessitated continuous travel, that Boston was one of the Nation's busiest savings and loan centers and that "a great deal of the necessary contact work . . . has, of course, been conducted over week-ends."

Reply Called "Nonsense"

Church characterized the reply as "nonsense!"

He also accused the board of blocking General Accounting Office efforts to audit the board's transactions and charged that Charles F. Jones, general manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, with deliberately conducting a lobbying campaign at Government expense against a bill affecting the HOLC pending in Congress. He said Jones franked statements and phoned to regional officers enlisting opposition to the bill and thereby violated Federal code provisions forbidding the use of appropriated monies to influence members of Congress on legislation.

Church last year charged Horace Russell, former HOLC general counsel, with illegal use of the franking privilege, an accusation which was followed by Russell's resignation.

Church demanded a Congressional investigation of FHLBB and HOLC fiscal affairs.

Connery Would Limit FCC Appropriation

Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asked yesterday that only an eight-month appropriation be given the Federal Communications Commission and that the House meanwhile investigate what the commission is doing.

Connery is the author of a resolution proposing a special inquiry of FCC. It has been pending before the House Rules Committee since February, Connery's office said.

Senate Group Boosts $83,848,100 Rivers And Harbors Authorization to $407,855,600

By the Associated Press.

A House-approved bill authorizing $83,848,100 of rivers and harbors projects grew in the hands of a Senate Commerce sub-committee yesterday to a $407,855,600 measure.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, of the sub-committee, described the legislation as "a great, constructive measure meeting the needs of waterway development in every part of the country. He predicted the full Commerce Committee would approve the bill today and recommend Senate passage.

As ratified by Sheppard's group, the measure authorizes $161,168,100 of navigation projects, $87,439,500 of flood-control works and $157,636,000 of multipurpose projects designed for navigation, power production, flood control and other purposes. It also carries an additional authorization of $1,600,000 for flood control on the Sacramento River in California.

Army engineers, who approved the 127 undertakings authorized by the legislation, said power production was involved incidentally in six of them, but was the prime purpose of none.

The bill does not provide actual funds for projects. In effect, it stamps the projects as worthwhile ones for Congress to vote funds for at some future time.

Senator Sheppard told reporters the amount of money involved in the legislation was "not nearly so formidable as the total would indicate" because the bill provides that no expenditures shall begin until after the next fiscal year, which starts July 1, and that no more than $60,000,000 shall be expended in any one year. At this rate, he said, seven years would be required to complete the program.

Army engineers said the six projects involving power production were these (estimates of total cost are given where available):

Santee-Congaree Rivers, South Carolina, $34,000,000.

Savannah River and Clark Hill reservoir between Georgia and South Carolina.

Guadalupe River, Texas.

Brazos River, Texas.

Neches River, Texas.

Pensacola, Markham Ferry and Fort Gibson reservoirs on Grand (Neosho) River, Oklahoma, $28,000,000.

A LaGuardia Hate

WILL NO MAN among the many professional and semi-pro bleeding hearts who are ever alert to defend the oppressed now come to the assistance of Mr. Frank A. Erickson, the wealthy bookmaker, who has incurred the personal disfavor of Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Mayor of New York?

Some time ago the mayor let it be known that he disapproved of Mr. Erickson and indicated that he would be unwelcome in New York, although Mr. Erickson has lived there for years. Since then efforts have been made to punish him in connection with sworn statements which are said to have been false made in connection with an application for permission to carry a pistol. This, of course, is legitimate prosecution, but another action has taken place in the meantime, as a result of which Mr. Erickson is placed under $10,000 bond to guarantee that he shall not pursue his calling outside the City and State of New York. It may be assumed that Mr. LaGuardia is trying to control Mr. Erickson's conduct in New Jersey and Florida because Jersey and Florida have been the scenes of his operations. He lives in New York, but conducts his business, which is that of bookmaking and gambler, in communities where the moral climate is more favorable to his activities.

In New York, for all that has been shown to the contrary, he is not a disorderly or criminal person, but a simple, honorable citizen of considerable substance. He produced more than $100,000 worth of negotiable securities to prove that he is not a bum, and there seems to have been no attempt to prove that he makes book or runs a gambling house in Mr. LaGuardia's city, but, nevertheless, the court compelled him to provide guarantees that he would not do so elsewhere.

IT WOULD appear from the facts which have been offered thus far that it is none of Mr. LaGuardia's business what Mr. Erickson does in Mr. Frank Hague's town or in Miami or Hollywood, Fla., and that this court order, issued in a case instigated by the mayor against a man for whom he has a hate on, violates a principle of great beauty for which the mayor himself has been known to contend with virtuous fury. If a Jersey City court should take similar action to restrain the activities of a Jersey man in New York, particularly labor activities, Mr. LaGuardia would immediately see the injustice and arrogance of this attempt to govern his town by remote control and resent it actively. Jersey City courts are sympathetic with Mayor Hague and construe the law his way, but the New York court in this case certainly was not unsympathetic with Mr. LaGuardia in a case which involved one of his pet hatreds. It just happens that Mr. Hague doesn't see eye to eye with Mr. LaGuardia on the subject of horse gambling. Neither do the governing officials of Miami and Hollywood. But Mr. Hague does feel very strongly on the subject of picketing, which, at a hint from him, his own courts would gladly define as disorderly conduct. A picket, therefore, almost certainly is a disorderly person to Mayor Hague, although a gambler is not necessarily so, in his opinion, and his courts might, with equal consistency, place a Jersey labor picket under a $10,000 bond not to picket in New York.

MR. LAGUARDIA'S liberalism or radicalism, is well known, and he is acknowledged to be the best mayor that New York has ever had. But of late he has been slightly swollen and certainly he has been inclined to strut and lump all who oppose or even differ with him in a class having less rights than those who agree or submit. This is the usual way of the extreme liberal or radical, than whom it is difficult to find a more intolerant type outside the ranks of the extreme reactionaries whom they so bitterly condemn.

There are many union organizers and leaders whom Mayor Hague's judges would adjudge to be disorderly persons under the same law that was distorted to serve LaGuardia's spite in the Erickson case, and with equal plausibility.

Mr. LaGuardia has practically threatened to run Mr. Erickson out of the city in which he lives. If Erickson is guilty of offenses there are police, prosecutors and courts to attend to those problems. But if he isn't, he has as much right to live here as Fiorello H. LaGuardia, unless the mayor is correct in thinking that his office gives him the power to banish from their own home all those whom he just doesn't happen to like. These short cuts across the rights of the in-wrong are worse than the offenses which they are intended to rebuke.

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

War By Other Means

By Barnet Nover

The Aggressors Enjoy The Advantage

ACCORDING to military experts, the advantage in modern warfare rests to an overwhelming degree with the defense. To dislodge an enemy occupying a well-entrenched position is said to require, under existing conditions, between three and four times the force necessary to defend that position.

Proof of this is found in the Chinese and Spanish wars in which the defense managed to give a remarkably good account of itself despite a very decided inferiority in training, equipment and materiel, notably airplanes.

HOWEVER, in the game of high politics, which is war waged by other than military means, the odds favor the nation or nations that take the initiative, i. e., the aggressors. On the other hand, the nations that are forced to assume a defensive position find themselves at a grave disadvantage.

The latest demonstration of this important fact is to be found at Tientsin. There the odds are overwhelmingly on the side of Japan, which is on the rampage, and very much against Great Britain, whose back is to the wall.

Yet, of the two powers, Great Britain is infinitely the richer and stronger. She commands the unspent resources of a vast empire. She has not wasted her substance, as Japan has done, in a prolonged and ruinous war. She is, theoretically at least, in a position to do Japan far more damage than Japan can do to her.

THE DIFFICULTY is that Great Britain must fight this bloodless war single-handed and with divided forces, whereas Japan is in a position to concentrate her fire as well as to summon very powerful aid from the outside.

This does not necessarily mean that the Tientsin blockade was imposed by Japan following consultation with Germany and Italy or that it represents a stage in a concerted program of action by the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle.

It is quite possible that the Berlin and Rome governments were informed by Tokyo as to the action which Japan planned to take against Great Britain in North China. It is apparent that Germany and Italy are far from displeased at the awkward and dangerous position in which Great Britain now finds herself.

By embarrassing the British, Japan has obviously rendered a real service to her totalitarian friends in Europe. But the point to be kept in mind is that Japan's move arose out of purely Japanese consideration; it is an incidental, if none the less important, circumstance that it happens to benefit Germany and Italy as well even as Germany's present maneuvers in Europe are helpful to Japan by making it difficult for Great Britain to counter the Japanese thrust at Tientsin.

IN OTHER WORDS, each of the three aggressors is in a position to capitalize the nuisance value of the other two. By preventing Great Britain and France from concentrating their efforts against Japan, on the one hand, or Germany, on the other, the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle serves a useful purpose for all three.

The question arises why, in view of the advantages of concerted action, the triangle has not yet been transformed into a triple alliance? Germany and Italy are now allies, in the full sense of that word, but Japan has so far refrained from allying herself with the axis powers.

The answer is that from the viewpoint of Japan an alliance with Germany would add little to and detract a good deal from the advantages of the present looser arrangement with the totalitarian powers of Europe.

An alliance might compel Japan to act at a moment when inaction would suit her purposes better or force her to remain quiescent when there were advantages to be gained by going forward.

An alliance, therefore, would, from Japan's point of view, be equivalent to gilding the lily. At the moment, certainly, there is nothing to prevent her from capitalizing the fears engendered in Great Britain and France by Hitler's activities and program just as there is nothing to prevent Germany from capitalizing every action by Japan that weakens the position and destroys the prestige of the Western powers.

The only value an alliance with Germany would have for Japan, which is why it cannot be ruled out as an eventuality, is that it might help bluff the Western powers into a peaceful surrender of their position in the Far East and, possibly, place a new barrier in the way of an Anglo-Russian pact as well.

IN CONTRAST to the position of the three powers who are on the offensive, the position of the nations on the defensive is lamentably weak.

It is always open to them to pool their strength, either in the Far East or Europe or both. Were they to do so, their collective position might become so impregnable as to be beyond effective challenge. It is obvious, for instance, that economic reprisals undertaken in concert by Great Britain, France and the United States, would be a body blow to the Japanese war machine.

The Japanese know it. That is why, although their obvious aim is to force all foreigners out of China, they are concentrating their fire, for the time being, on Great Britain alone. At Tientsin the Japanese have gone out of their way to respect American rights. They are not likely to show such solicitude after British rights have been destroyed.

IN ACTUALITY, the struggle at Tientsin is not a struggle between Japan and Great Britain alone. It is a struggle between Japan and all the Western powers, including the United States. To ignore that is to take a short-sighted view of the realities of the world situation. Nor is it a struggle whose consequences will be limited to the Far East. What happens at Tientsin today and tomorrow will have a direct and vital bearing on what happens in Europe tomorrow.

The totalitarian powers know all this, which is why they automatically support each other. The nations whom the totalitarian powers are seeking to destroy know it too. But they are paralyzed into inaction.

No one can expect Japan's threat of force to be met by force. That would be foolhardy. Japan is least vulnerable in the military and naval sphere. She is most vulnerable in the economic and financial sphere. And that is precisely where the Western powers are strongest. But whether they will use this strength against Japan, either singly or in concert, is by no means certain.

Exam On Investment Sense

("Each beneficiary will be required under the will to pass an examination in what constitutes sound investments."—News item.)

Q.—What is money?

A.—Money is something you always wish you had up to the time you get so much you wish you were back in the days when you were wishing you had it.

Q.—When you possess money what should be your first consideration?

A.—To preserve the principal and if possible get some income.

Q.—What is income?

A.—Income is something you try to get so the Government can take it away from you.

Q.—What is interest?

A.—It would be more to the point if you asked WHERE is interest.

Q.—Very well, then, where is interest?

A.—If I could answer that one I wouldn't need an inheritance.

Q.—What is an investment?

A.—An investment is anything that pays 1 per cent without interruption for more than two years without being either the subject of a monopoly probe or a Federal attack.

Q.—Is a deposit in a savings bank at 4 per cent an investment?

A.—At 4 per cent it would be a miracle.

Q.—Are common stocks an investment?

A.—Are you buying or selling?

Q.—Lissen, I'm the one who is asking questions here. Are they an investment or not?

A.—No. Common stocks will only be regarded as an investment when they get about five times higher than they are now, pay a third as much in dividends and are the subject of wholly insane predictions.

Q.—What is a bond?

A.—Government or private?

Q.—What's the difference?

A.—About ½ of 1 per cent.

Q.—Is real estate an investment?

A.—If you had tried to sell a house during the past seven years you wouldn't ask a question like that.

Q.—What is a profit?

A.—It depends on whose radio voice you are listening to.

Q.—I ask you again, what is a profit?

A.—Profit is what posterity may make on your losses.

Q.—What is a deficit?

A.—A deficit is money soundly invested in things ordinarily put off until you can afford to pay for them.

Q.—Do you know the meaning of the word debt?

A.—I used to think so, but that was back under the Republicans.

Q.—What is your understanding of debt now?

A.—I understand there is no such thing as debt now.

Q.—Let's take an example. You inherit a million dollars, you wish to do something that will cost $5,000,000; in doing it you find that it will cost $11,000,000. By this time you have spent your own million and you owe five more. Is that a debt?

A.—No; it is an investment.

Q.—Are you sure of that?

A.—I am unless it turns out that I can't rely on my radio.

RKO-Radio Announces Its New Productions

Plans 58 Features, 198 Shorts for 1939-40; Lincoln Films Show No Signs of Conflict; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

HOT ON THE HEELS of yesterday's sketchy survey of the projected activities of the major motion picture producing companies for the new season comes a detailed announcement of RKO-Radio's plans for its production schedule for 1939-40. It seems to me that I hinted RKO-Radio would be next in the field with this news.

BELL

At any rate, RKO-Radio will be in the running for the new film year with 58 feature-length productions and 198 short subjects, according to disclosures made yesterday by Ned E. Depinet, vice president, before the company's annual international sales convention, in session at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y. Popularity-tested properties, Broadway hits and best-seller books dominate the program.

Foremost among the feature productions for 1939-40 may be mentioned "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the Victor Hugo classic in which Lon Chaney was an earlier silent star, with Charles Laughton succeeding to the stellar billing, under the direction of William Dieterle, director of "Juarez;" "The American Way," a picturization of the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart play in which Fredric March and Florence Eldredge starred on the New York stage; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," Robert E. Sherwood's own adaptation of his Pulitzer Prize play, starring Raymond Massey in the title role, direct from his Broadway triumph; "Passport to Life," starring Cary Grant; "Vigil in the Night," latest story by Dr. A. J. Cronin, author of "The Citadel," starring Carole Lombard; "Ivanhoe," a spectacular filmization of Walter Scott's immortal novel; "Nurse Edith Cavell," starring Anna Neagle in her first American-made picture, and "The Man Who Lost Himself," with Leslie Howard as star, coproducer and director. Since that does not add up to 58, there are, of course, many more.

Sponsors Popular Shorts

The list of supporting players is longer than you have been in town and is notable for the inclusion of such names as May Robson, Edna May Oliver, ZaSu Pitts, H. B. Warner, Joseph Calleia and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. The rosters of directors and writers also are impressive.

RKO-Radio is fortunate in having under its productional wing some of the most popular short subjects that find their way to the silver sheet. Two of the foremost of these outstanding "smashes" among the abbreviated flickers are the Walt Disney productions—Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, et al.—and "The March of Time," easily Ameria's most conspicuously successful documented newsreel. Then, of course, there is the old reliable pioneer RKO-Pathe News, of which there will be 100 issues. Breaking the short subjects down a bit, there will be 74 single-reelers and 24 two-reelers.

All this should bring no end of comfort to Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater, where all of this product will be accorded its first run in Washington.

Next!

This seems to be as good a time as any to observe that, except for a possible clash in titles, there will be no conflict apparent to the casual theatergoer between Twentieth Century-Fox's "Young Mr. Lincoln," now at the Palace, and Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." In scope of treatment of the early life of Abraham Lincoln, motivation and purpose, these pictures are poles apart. Young Mr. Lincoln, as I have said so many times before, deals with a single episode in the life of the young Illinois lawyer; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" concerns itself with the full sweep of the first half of a tragic career. As I also have remarked before, Darryl Zanuck was plenty smart in being first in the field with the less important of the two films.

That high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, eastern division manager of Columbia Pictures and treasurer of the Washington Variety Club, who pilots club members around the links once a year, already is preparing for this annual chore. Master Galanty announces that the showmen's annual golf tournament and dinner dance has been scheduled for Friday, August 25, at the Congressional Country Club. Applications from Varieteers and their friends may be addressed either to Mr. Galanty or his cochairman, Harry Brown. These two and their committeemen, Nat Browne, of the Warner organization, and Sam Wheeler, of Twentieth Century-Fox, are formulating plans for the biggest tournament in the history of the club—one in which, incidentally, even the dubbest of the dubs may emerge with a prize.

"The Great Waltz," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacular romantic drama, inspired by the life, loves and music of Johann Strauss 2d, will be revived as chief feature of the new bill at the Little Theater, beginning tomorrow. Fernand Gravet, Luise Rainer and Meliza Korjus costar at the head of a brilliant cast. This is the only picture Miss Korjus ever has made in America—why that should be goodness only knows—and it is worth the price of admission just to hear her sing the Strauss songs.

The dramatic committee of the Arts Club of Washington, under the direction of Maud Howell Smith, will present the Washington Players in a summertime version of Shakespeare's riotous comedy of "The Taming of the Shrew," in tabloid form, on Thursday of next week. This abridged acting version will be known as "Katherine and Petruchio" and will be presented at 8:30 p. m., in the gardens of the club.

The National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, will inaugurate its season of summer festival programs, tonight at 8:15 o'clock, with the Blackfriars' production of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." The play will be preceded by a half hour's concert by the Washington Gas Light Co. Employes Band, conducted by Otto Siebeneichen. In case of inclement weather, Thursday night.

GEORGE BACKER, who succeeded the late B. Charney Vladeck as the American Labor Party's member of the city council, will not be a candidate for the job this fall . . . Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., are chartering a schooner for the summer season and will cruise near Campo Bello Island . . . Lillian Hellman has refused $100,000 for the movie rights to "The Little Foxes." Herman Shumlin, the producer, has indicated that he may do the screen version himself, employing the same cast now in the show, with Miss Hellman writing the scenario . . . Aviation experts insist that Sonny Whitney will be the No. 1 man in the Pan American Airways within the next 12 months.

BYRON NELSON, the new open golf champion, received a gift from some of his golf colleagues last Wednesday . . . It was a trick watch—which had 68 seconds marked off . . . Vic Ghezzi wrote the presentation note. It read: "For a change, we wanted to see you OVER par."

FRIDAY NIGHT Gilbert Miller tried to induce Gene Cavallero, owner of the Colony Restaurant, to accept a role in the new Hecht-MacArthur play. The role is that of an Italian juror, and MacArthur had Cavallero in mind when he wrote the part . . . Donald Ogden Stewart will write the first book he's written in ten years, for Harcourt-Brace. Stewart, who is famed as a humorist, will write about the position of the writer in the changing world of today . . . The show sponsored by the Amer. Comm. for Anti-Nazi Literature on Sunday, at the Tavern-on-the Green, will feature a broadcast from one of the secret anti-Nazi radio stations in Germany.

LAST YEAR Sigmund Klein, the bodybuilder and instructor in weight-lifting, was visited by a young man who inquired how long it would take for him to learn how to lift 500 pounds . . . "That depends," Klein told him, "upon your present condition, and the amount of time you can devote to it" . . . The man agreed to take a two-week course and completed it successfully . . . Klein never heard about him again—until he read that the man had pleaded guilty in the Bathelt murder case—where the victim's body had been encased in a slab of cement.

GRACE MOORE'S husband, Valentin Parrera, supported Gen. Franco during the rebellion in Spain. Parrera, however, now is worried—because he has received no response to the cables he sent to his mother, who had been living in Madrid . . . Excellent reading: Ben Hecht's "A Book of Miracles" and the fascinating "Inside Asia," by John Gunther . . . Two weeks ago an American correspondent went to the Dominican Republic to interview Trujillo, the dictator there. Trujillo became very much interested in the interviewer. "I like you," he stated. "So I buy you a newspaper." And he did! . . . Noel Carter was so pleased at her testimony in the Buckner case this week that when she registered on the Normandie she signed "Nick Carter."

DR. KARL Menninger, the psychiatrist and author of "Man Against Himself," Friday night was introduced to Tallulah Bankhead, who asked: "Do you think I should be analyzed?" Dr. Menninger replied: "It would be a wonderful experience—for the analyst" . . . Jack Dempsey, who will open a restaurant at the World's Fair, discussed the many enterprises in which he now is engaged. "Why so many businesses, Jack?" Dempsey was asked. "You've got enough money" . . . "Well," Dempsey explained, "I once wanted to know how it feels to have a million dollars. So I went to the bank, collected ten $100,000 bills and put them in the little pocket of my pants. I rode from New York to Frisco with my million bucks in my pocket. How did it feel? Boy—it felt great!"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 19.—Now that the Neely bill is about to get another going over from our Congressmen, it might be interesting to see what Hollywood is doing to counteract screwy things like that bill, which is packed with so much dynamite it would practically put Hollywood out of business.

HOPPER

I talked with Florence Parry, of the Pittsburgh Press, who was in Washington and listened for five days to half a dozen Congressmen putting in their oars before she got a chance to testify against the bill.

She said during those days the bill was never read in meeting. One Congressman admitted he hadn't seen a picture in two years; another said he didn't care much about them, any way. She said: "I don't believe any other industry would allow itself to be kicked around in such fashion." And she's not part of our business either!

It's gotten so that everybody is trying to run the picture business except—the picture business. And it's our own fault. What do we do to counteract it? For an impression, we usually send out a bunch of young girls, sometimes called "glamorous," who look pretty, simper, and giggle like school girls, instead of sending ambassadors who would lend the industry dignity, authority and intelligence.

I chatted today with some New England exhibitors who told me the small towns are fed up with wise-cracking, screwball stuff which puts ideas in their kids' heads.

They say, and it's true, that the fundamental principle of small-town Americans is respect for home, themselves and neighbors. They resent propaganda pictures of all kinds. And while they don't agree with Hitler, right or wrong, he has a right to his own ideas.

They claim that small towns are more modern than big cities, because they have more reading time, so aren't as provincial as city dwellers! They're still Puritan about their marriage, want down-to-earth stories about real people. Rural America is real, not phoney.

Nice to hear that Col. Joy, who's assisting Nunnally Johnson prepare "Grapes of Wrath," has made several trips North to talk with the migratory workers and became so interested that he is trying to arrange for land and help them get another start in life.

I understand Mervyn Le Roy, who has finished "The Wizard of Oz," told a friend: "I don't aim to be a genius; I only want to be like Walt Disney."

Paul Draper is the nearest thing to a flying fish with taps I've ever seen. He's terrific and why not since he comes of a long line of talent? His father, Paul, was first soloist with the Boston Symphony when under the direction of Carl Much. His mother wrote "Music at Midnight" and is one of our ace decorators. His aunt Ruth isn't bad, either.

Don't tell me Gregory Ratoff is romancing with Kay Aldrich. But I'll be darned if he didn't close the set after she came on it while doing a scene for "Intermezzo."

Did you know that Maria Seiber, Marlene Dietrich's daughter, got her naturalization papers in New York the same day her mother got hers here? Marlene, Remarque and Von Sternberg all went back together—except Von Sternberg motored.

If mirrors could speak. On the Swedish interior for "Intermezzo" are mirrors that once graced the bath room doors of the Poinciana Hotel in Palm Beach. Some pretty fancy faces looked into them there, too.

Frances Brice, Fanny's daughter, may do a bareback ride in the circus sequence for the Marx Brothers picture.

Selznick flew his own publicity man to Las Vegas to be present at Dick Carlson's wedding. Why? Wouldn't it be legal without one?

Royalty Still Packs 'Em in At Trans-Lux

Their Majesties' Visit Pictured Second Week; Complete Bill Added

The King and Queen of England are still topnotch everywhere but especially at the Trans-Lux Theater, where they take the limelight for a second week and enable those not so fortunate as to see them in the flesh to review their visit in these parts as so ably presented by photography and sound.

All of this royalty film is in addition to a complete new show with such interesting news events depicted as President Roosevelt addressing the West Point graduates and delivering their diplomas; the latest developments in China, whereby the British and other foreign settlements are endangered by the Japanese forces; striking shots of the German refugees at sea on board the German liner St. Louis; the Grand Coulee Dam nearing completion and spectacular snow drifts in the Rockies vying with a gambling ship off the California coast for subtemperature honors.

In the realm of sports there are Byron Nelson winning the National Open golf title and Australian greyhounds chasing a live rabbit in a thrilling championship race.

The short subjects include "More Power to You," a thrilling pictorial story of oil; a "Going Places" featurette, entitled "The Theater of the Sky," and having to do about the mysterious bodies existing above us, such as the milky way, comets, etc.; a very pleasing "Our Gang" comedy, "Duel Personalities," and "Goofy and Wilbur," the cartoon, Disney's best since "Three Little Pigs," Wilbur, the grasshopper, threatening the laurels of the popular Donald Duck.

Cross Roads

Jeeves' creator, P. G. Wodehouse, clipped off an adaptation of the Perhaps you may recall "Can-years ago, and last night the Cross Roads Players presented their barn theater production of it, across the Potomac in Virginia.

It is an airy busines, this piece of high life in Vienna before the Anschluss, and while the players were not equal to the high comedy it involved, last night's audience got some pleasant gigles as the play progressed.

Perhaps you may recall "Candlelight" from its most recent local incarnation. That was "You Never Know," the musical, which Clifton Web, Lupe Velez and Libby Holman played at the National season before last. It concerns the upper-crust Prince Haseldorf-Schlobitten, who is quite a man-about-Ault-Wein. He has not only a present filled with lovely ladies, but also a neat past. His valet thinks he is quite a fellow, and, when the prince is away, Josef, the valet, manages to have an evening posing as the philandering nobleman.

Lady Is No Lady

The lady he picks up for his condescensions, however, is no lady, but a lady's maid and, of course, there is a husband involved, as well as the lady herself. The misunderstandings take place in a single evening and by the time the curtain falls, the characters are as social-conscious as a member of Congress.

Naturally, the Cross Roads Players do not set themselves up as the Gertrude Lawrence-Leslie Howard-Reginald Owen trio which starred in the piece at New York's Empire Theater. The dialogue is not the very best Wodehouse and, to seem at all amusing, must be snapped quickly from one player to the next. Last night's company showed an unfortunate tendency to accent every line of the piece, slowing down the little action there is, and failing to make most of the scenes sparkle. The second act improved somewhat over the first, but a speed twice as fast and understatement of the lines, rather than the continual overemphasis, would brighten the proceedings.

Charles Grunwell was the elegant prince and Austin Gattis the ambitious valet. Doris Edwards played the masquerading Marie and Ann Moran and Marjorie Harrison were the other players of the distaff side. Buel Patch, Benton Henderson and Charles McLendon completed Director C. Adolph Glassgold's cast. R. L. C.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hollywood, June 19.—The very well known Lord Castlerosse, chief newspaper reporter on Lord Beaverbrook's British staff, has sold Darryl Zanuck "Burton of Arabia." Over a year ago, Darryl told me he intended to film a biography of Richard Burton who translated the "Arabian Nights" and who was the only Christian to make the sacred pilgrimage to the Mohammedan city of Mecca and escape with his life. Apparently Castlerosse's script was satisfactory, for a goodly sum was paid for the rights.

The life of Burton was a stormy one and he was so discredited for many years, that the girl he loved refused to marry him. By the way, who started the report Zanuck would make no more biographies? He has "Brigham Young," Steinmetz," "Stephen Foster," "Little Old New York," "Belle Starr," "Lillian Russell" and many others.

Surprising that Genevieve Tobin ever wants to come back to Hollywood. In the Orient she was hailed on all sides, given headlines cheered in the streets and treated as an American queen. But she and her bridegroom, William Keighley, are due at Warner Brothers Studio in July. Bill will start directing "The Gusher" by Dick McAuley. Interesting too, is the story of this oil saga. It deals with the fight between the whites and Indians for possession of the oil lands and stars Edward G. Robinson, with John Payne, Gale Page, Humphrey Bogart, June Wyman and Alan Hale in important roles. We've seen just snatches of what happened when the Indians became fabulously rich but "The Gusher," Jack Warner says, will really go into detail.

Charles Laughton arrives in New York Wednesday, and just as we told you, he heads west to play the Lon Chaney role in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." But before Charlie leaves New York, he will keep a date with the income tax men to pay what he owes. Mrs. Laughton (Elsa Lanchester) has already paved the way, so it will probably be just the formality of writing a check to clear his account. Laughton hasn't been in America for several years and will find a royal welcome and plenty of jobs. RKO plans to spend over $2,000,000 on "The Hunchback" and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has already been signed for the poet, with Montague Love playing the archbishop.

One well known movie favorite can do more than a dozen gold braided, high hatted diplomats to promote peace and harmony. That's been proved againsby the visit of John Garfield to Mexico City, where he was given a rousing welcome by 3,000 fans who met him at the airport. I am confident the recent anti-American demonstration was paid mob, possibly organized by a certain group of people who wish to make trouble. On our recent visit to Guaymas, we had the most courteous treatment, which would indicate the real Mexicans have no bitter feeling against our country—that it is only the subversive element which exists there, as it unfortunately does in our own country.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Madeleine Carroll sails for England next week, but there will be no reconciliation; Tyrone Power and Annabella added a note of unexpected excitement to the Clarence Brown party when they arrived at the Brown ranch in a plane; Wallace Beery has a reservation on the Yankee Clipper August 9 and plans to take Carol Ann flying to Europe; 'twas none other than Randy Scott who drove Dorothy Lamour to the airport when she planed out Sunday night, and Randall and Louise Stanley were as happy as if they had never parted at the Joseph Pasternak cocktail party. Joe served his refreshments on the lawn, with gay umbrellas adding a touch of color; Bette Davis made one of her rare appearances and, of course, Deanna Durbin and the Henry Kosters were there.

Willie and Eugene Howard are canceling their Earl Carroll engagement to go East for the new George White Scandals; the Jay Paley party, honoring Dorothy Draper, was a huge success and went on until the milkman called. Ken Murray has borrowed Harry Brand's Beverly Hills mansion and will entertain his pals; Rosemary Lane and Tom McAvity are serious, so don't be surprised if theirs is the next Hollywood marriage; today was the wedding anniversary of Lili Damita and Errol Flynn and Peggy Fears and A. C. Blumenthal; the Joel McCreas and the children will take a three-month holiday in the Scandinavian countries; Leslie Howard didn't miss a dance at Victor Hugo's, even doing the rumba with Helen Jackson; Anita Louise is copying the Queen of England and having summer parasols made to match all her summer clothes; does Eleanor Powell know that Abe Lyman is in town? Tony Martin, after four months of breaking records, is canceling his personal appearances to come back and see Alice Faye.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Bird Yells

The call of the Emu bird, which sounds like a tom-tom and can be heard for 3 miles, was recorded for use in "The Wizard of Oz."

Capital Alabama Club Host to State Press

Senators, House Members, Federal Officials and 250 Guests Hear Talk On Newspapers by Secretary Wallace

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Newspapers should build up among their readers a concept of the general welfare which transcends the welfare of any individual or any group," Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told members of the Alabama Press Association last night. He spoke at a banquet given in their honor by the Alabama State Society at the Willard Hotel.

"Our country, with its wealth of natural resources, with its ingenuity and mechanical skill, ought to have and can have a national income of $100,000,000,000;" he said. "But such an income cannot be attained without teamwork among all our great groups, without mutual understanding among agriculture, labor and industry. Such an income cannot be attained if any two of these groups gang up on the third."

Asserting that the pressure on a newspaper are mostly in the direction of favoring the interests of business, Secretary Wallace urged that it is especially important for those who determine the arrangement and content of the editorial and news pages of our newspapers to strive to hold the scales level between these three great groups."

Secretary Wallace, charging that there were at times glaring inaccuracies in the public press, suggested that the newspapers set up a board of their own to pass judgment on individual papers which are accused of departing from the "generally high standard."

Such a board, he said, "might confine itself to those few cases which were the subject of great controversy, with charges of unfairness, inaccuracy, injury to public interest or injury to innocent persons."

At this point Secretary Wallace criticized an editorial in the Chicago Tribune which stated there that the United States was not going to raise enough wheat this year to feed the American people. He denied there was any danger of a wheat shortage and estimated that, with this year's crop from 700,000,000 to 710,000,000 bushels and the carryover, there will be nearly twice as much as the American people can eat.

Asserts Farmer Needs Share of Aid

Answering the criticism of some newspapers which have deplored the farmers' programs as being in violation of the "natural operation of economic law," he declared "it seems unrealistic in the highest degree to expect agriculture alone to live in a world of competition unrestrained. It is not fair to give places at the table of protection to everyone else and to expect the farmer to scramble on the floor for the crumbs."

The Speaker of the House, William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, acted as toastmaster at the dinner and his brother, Senator John H. Bankhead, introduced Secretary Wallace. Raymond Clapper, president of the Gridiron Club, also spoke, on "The Press of 1939," and Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson read a message from President Roosevelt.

The program, opened by R. Lee Barnes, retiring president, also included a toast to Alabama by Senator Lister Hill, to which M. C. Giles, president of the Alabama Press Association, responded. The invocation was offered by Dr. J. W. Rustin of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Those at the head table, in addition to the speakers, included Mrs. Bankhead, Mrs. Barnes, Col. Allen Crenshaw, new president, and Mrs. Crenshaw, Mrs. Rustin and Mrs. Hill.

Many Distinguished Guests Attend

Others at the head table were Associate Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, Associate Justice William O. Douglas, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. Lister Hill, Representative and Mrs. George Grant, Representative and Mrs. Henry Steagall, Representative and Mrs. Sam Hobbs, Representative and Mrs. Pete Jarman, Representative and Mrs. John Sparkman, Representative and Mrs. Luther Patrick, and Representative Joe Starnes.

The guests included 250 from the Alabama press, who gathered for the dinner following a day of sight-seeing in the Capital. Dancing followed the dinner program.

Among other prominent Alabamans now residing in Washington who attended were the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission; Marion Caskie, and Mrs. Caskie; J. Hayden Aldredge, a newly appointed member of the commission and Mrs. Aldredge; Col. Sumpter Smith, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Mrs. Smith; Gen. Hollan Smith, of the United States Marine Corps, and Mrs. Smith, and Claude E. Hamilton, jr., chief counsel for the R. F. C.

Women's Press Club Honors New Officers

75 Attend Dinner At Congressional Country Club

The Women's National Press Club, closing its season with an inaugural dinner honoring its new president, Ruby Black, and officers who will serve with her, divided its time last night between ceremonies in their honor and questions on the royal visit, following accounts of it given by Edward T. Folliard, of The Post, and Michael McDermott, director of current information of the State Department. About 75 members and guests attended the dinner, which was given at the Congressional Country Club, with presidents of other press associations in the Capital as guests.

Hope Ridings Miller, retiring president, presided at the opening of the program and talked briefly on the club and its membership. She presented to Miss Black the Rigby Bowl, given to the club by Miss Cora Rigby, who served as its president for 10 years. It is held by each president during the year of her administration and, at the close of her term, her name is engraved on it and it is passed on to her successor. The outgoing president is given a silver bowl as a permanent gift from the club.

Mrs. Miller read the names of the past presidents, and presented those attending the dinner. They were Mrs. Lily Shepard, who was the first president; Ruth Jones, Martha Strayer and Mary Hornaday. Others who have served as presidents include: Miss Rigby, Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett, Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, Winifred Mallon, and Doris Fleeson, making Miss Black the organization's eleventh president. Both she and Mrs. Miller, whom she succeeds are natives of Texas.

After receiving the Rigby bowl, she presented the club bowl and an orchid to Mrs. Miller and was given an orchid as a gift from the club. Mrs. Miller's mother, Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, who recently received a World's Fair award as the outstanding poet of Texas, was among the guests at the head table and was dressed in pink lace with a small hat to match.

Other new officers seated there were: Bess Furman, first vice president; Vesta Cummings, second vice president; Christine Sandler, recording secretary; Mary V. Johnson, corresponding secretary; Josephine Hemphill, treasurer; Mrs. Miller, Isabel Kinnear Griffin and Una Franklin, directors.

Catholic Daughters To Close Season

Court District of Columbia, Daughters of America, will have its final social meeting of the season tonight following a short discussion of business at the Willard Hotel. The program will include music by the St. Francis Xavier Trio, Miss Dorothea Famosa, Miss Kathlun Erwin and Miss Ruth McCoy; readings by Miss Josephine McCorry and piano-accordion selections by Miss Ethel Keyser.

A dinner bridge was given last night by the ways and means committee headed by Mrs. Lillian Neddo, at the Fuhrman Studio in the Fairfax Hotel.

The Poster Club will present its work for inspection at the meeting tonight. This work has been in charge of Miss Augusta E. Uhl, assisted by Miss Erna Luetscher and Miss Agnes Quinn. The members are looking forward to the display as the posters will be shipped to the national convention to be included in the national display.

The convention will be held in Detroit from July 10 to July 15. The delegate from Court District of Columbia will be Miss Uhl, teritorial deputy. She will accompany Miss Josephine Walsh, the grand regent. The Statler Hotel will be the headquarters.

Announcement has been made that Miss Frances LeMay and Miss Mary Helen Green were the winners of the scholarship granted by the senior court to the two outstanding and qualified Junior Catholic Daughters. Miss LeMay will enter the Immaculate Conception Academy next fall and Miss Green will continue her studies at Immaculata Seminary.

Miss Gertrude O'Connor has been appointed chairman of the Junior Catholic Daughters.

Newspaperwomen Cancel Ball for Columnists

Cancellation of the columnists' ball, which was to have been held this evening at the Shoreham Hotel, was announced yesterday by Miss Katherine Brooks, president of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington, which was sponsoring the event.

Refunds are being made by the club to those who had made reservations.

The ball is sponsored each year for benefit of the club's bed at the Children's Hospital. Preparations had been practically completed, and many noted columnists had accepted invitations to be honor guests. The project has not been abandoned, though, and the benefit will be held later in the season, with date and fuller plans to be announced later.

Band Concert

Washington Gas Light Employes Band, Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, 7:30 p. m., following the concert the Blackfriars Guild will present Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Dennis E. Connell in the title role.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acid waste in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of poisonous waste.

When functional kidney disorder permits poisonous matter to remain in the blood, you won't feel well. This may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. If you have trouble with frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning, there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous wastes from your blood. Get Doan's Pills today.

F Street Club Luncheon Yields Vacation Plans

Mrs. Walter G. Distler Entertains For 11; Hostess to Go to Fair And Then to Camp With Children

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

LUNCHING AT THE 1925 F Street Club is one way—and a very good one—to get a line-up on what's going on, who's going vacationing, and when.

Yesterday, for example, when Mrs. Walter G. Distler entertained 11 guests, table talk yielded more than its quota of news. The get-together, which originally was planned for the Chevy Chase Club, was shifted to F Street when the weather indicated a party in town would be every bit as pleasant as one in the suburbs. And it certainly was.

Guests gathering at 1 o'clock lingered until long past midafternoon; tossing the ball of conversation lightly back and forth for well over two hours; finding the party unusually diverting; and, incidentally, dropping more than one vacation "personal" before the event was over.

THE HOSTESS herself, who was trimly turned out in a navy and white ensemble, said she would be off to the New York World's Fair this week-end, and would go on from there to put her daughter and son in camp before returning to Washington.

Pretty Mrs. Robert Ash, who was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Edward White Luna, of Dallas, divulged no vacation plans but Mrs. Luna casually mentioned that the novel she has been working on for some time is now finished, and that the chief problem now is to decide on a title. She and my mother, Mrs. Alfred Lafayette Ridings (Grace Dupree Ridings), who also hails from Texas, had quite a chat about the Lone Star State and this business of creative writing.

MRS. LUNA writes under the name of F. Halliburton Luna, and says she has been working on her novel for some time, both here and in California, where she recently made an extended visit.

Mrs. Edward Wilber, another in the company, has no immediate vacation plans, but come August, she and her husband will be off to Bermuda for a month's stay. That time of summer has also been selected as away-from-Washington season for Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who with her family will spend a month at Rehoboth Beach, having chosen that resort rather than Nantucket, where they were last summer.

Just back from a successful Democratic regional conference in New York, which Mrs. Essary also attended, was Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, head of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. The last week in July and the first in August will find her and her family away from these parts; but whether they will be in Nantucket, or some other sea and sand resort, she does not yet know. August will be vacation time for Miss Ruth Jones, who will shut away her very competent typewriter for that month and be off for a rest.

A TRIP TO Guatemala is on the tentative summer schedule for Mrs. John C. Folger, another guest at yesterday's luncheon. Whether it will come to pass is still a question, she said; but chances seem more than promising. Mr. Folger's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Merritt, have recently taken a large house in Guatemala City—he's head of an oil company there—so if the Folgers choose to go, they have a place ready and waiting for them. The middle of August is the time they will go—if they do go.

Another southern locale—Mexico City, no less—is also tempting another of yesterday's guests away from Washington. While her plans have not yet been completed, Mrs. Louis Caldwell and her daughter, Barbara, may spend August south of the Rio Grande with Mr. and Mrs. Burke Summers, who have taken a house there. Mrs. Summers, her daughter, Virginia, and her son have already gone. Mr. Summers will join them later, and don't be surprised if Mrs. Caldwell and Barbara do, too.

Before then, however, Barbara probably will spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg and their daughter, Eloise, at Rehoboth Beach, which is in a way of becoming a summer Capital, what with everybody in town planning a stay there before the season's over.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: That traveling twosome, Mrs. John T. H. Mitchell and her pretty daughter, Ann Mitchell, who frequently visit in Washington, are now in London being entertained right and left . . . After two months in England, they plan to go on to the Riviera for a visit before returning to their Connecticut home . . . Their party at the Waldorf-Astoria a few weeks ago in honor of the Maharajah of Rajpipla was, from all accounts, one of THE events of the spring saeson — everybody there from the John Jacob Astors and Mrs. Frederic Watriss to Fannie Ward, Theda Bara and Douglas Fairbanks, jr. . . . My, but they have a good time, those Mitchells, but although they continually enjoy a partying whirl on both sides of the Atlantic, they also find time for some Serious Business . . . Whether they're wintering at Nassau or Bermuda, or their Waldorf-Astoria apartment in New York, or summering at their home in Greenwich, Conn., or visiting in London, Paris or Washington, they're always gathering material for songs . . . Mrs. Mitchell does the music; Miss Mitchell, the lyrics—both published under the name of Heart and Ann Mitchell . . . The two are planning to spend part of next winter in Washington, and their many friends here are hoping they will.

Woodwards To Live in Ohio

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Louis Woodward, who were married last Saturday, will make their home at 3911 Oak street, Mariemont, Ohio, after a honeymoon in the lake region of New York State.

The bride, the former Miss Helen Beal, is the daughter of Mrs. William D. Beal, of Delaware, Ohio. Until her marriage she served as an associate editor of Pathfinder Magazine in Washington. Mr. Woodward is an engineer with the United States Public Health Service.

Their wedding took place at 4 o'clock in the Foundry Methodist Church here, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, the pastor, officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, John Beal, of Washington, wore a bouffant frock of turquoise organdy embroidered in white, with a brief matching veil fastened with three gardenias. She carried a bouquet of these flowers and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant, Mrs. Harold N. Graves, jr., of Washington, was attired in yellow georgette and carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and talisman roses. George Woodward, of Chicago, served as his brother's best man.

A reception for members of the family and close friends followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Beal, 1435 Shepherd street. Among out-of-town guests were Mrs. William D. Beal, mother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Woodward and Miss Betty Woodward, of Chicago.

Mrs. Woodward received her A. B. degree at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware and her M. S. from the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, where she was awarded a Pulitzer traveling fellowship in 1936. Mr. Woodward received his B. S. C. E. degree from Washington University in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis and their young daughter will leave the end of the week for Santa Barbara, Calif., where Mrs. Feis has been loaned a house for the summer.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NEW YORK, June 19.—Though summer slipcovers shroud the furniture and gauze wrappings cover the pictures in many of the homes here, there's still great bustle and activity in town—all because of the World's Fair. New Yorkers are getting a bit weary of showing out-of-town friends around the Flushing ex-swamp, and now draw the line at accompanying them to anything other than dinner in one of the fascinating foreign restaurants, which they still do with tremendous enthusiasm.

Though the prices at some of these places are just a little under their country's war debt, the food is so delicious that it all seems well worthwhile. On Saturday evening the Hungarian pavilion was thronged at the dinner hour. The specialty is Gulyas (goulash to you), prepared in real Budapest style, which is NOT the way one usually gets it in this country. The waiters all wear the kind of costumes you see in "The Student Prince" and there's a charming balcony overlooking the bar.

FROM DINNER in this pleasant setting we skipped over to the amusement or "Glen Echo" section, where all good tourists get themselves photographed with their escorts and order souvenir ashtrays made with signatures in their own handwriting. These concessions are near Fountain Lake, where at 10 o'clock everybody gathered to watch a display of fireworks and fountains marvelously illuminated, with beautiful deep crimsons and brilliant greens predominating.

Billy Rose's Aquacade, which seems to be tying with the General Motors Exhibit as the most popular at the fair, was jammed with people. Every place was taken, many of the spectators arriving an hour before the show went on for the last time that night. The seats were open to the sky, and the night was cool, but the beautiful "Aquagals" in their bathing suits never so much as shivered. The crowd was not at all a chic one, but everybody was friendly, good natured, and well behaved.

AFTER ONE has lived in the shadow of the Washington Monument, the Trylon doesn't seem particularly impressive, though it is actually loftietr than the Monument. The Perisphere is more striking, lighted a soft, deep blue. Most people agreed that the fair is much lovelier by night, though there is less to see in the way of foreign and domestic exhibits, as many of the pavilions close at 10 p. m.

Most of the fair employes are young—in their late 'teens or early twenties. One youth who pushed us around the grounds in one of the comfortable rolling chairs said that many of those holding such jobs were from the South, instead of native New Yorkers. Incidentally, this mode of locomotion is the best for getting a general panoramic view of everything. And for those without cars, nothing could be simpler for getting out to the fair than taking one of the trains which run every ten minutes from Pennsylvania Station.

DESPITE the reports that the evening attractions at the fair have cramped night life in New York, we found La Conga packed to the doors on entering this haunt later in the evening. A swing band and a South American rhumba, conga and tango outfit alternate and the clientele seemed to have absolutely no inhibitions, for in the midst of one very good number everybody started doing a snake dance around the floor, one man beating a drum and another holding a lantern he picked off from the wall.

On Sunday we lunched at the old brownstone home of Justice and Mrs. Phillip McCook, who are both well known in Washington, the former being a cousin of Mrs. McCook Knox. They are at present at their country home in Black Point, Conn., but their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Sheldon McCook, served as hosts.

THE TRAIN going up was filled with Washington bachelors bound for college reunions. Robert Buell, of the State Department, was en route for a brief stay on Cape Cod before attending the Harvard reunion tomorrow, and Samuel Biddle, George Wheeler and John Hamilton were bound for festivities at Princeton.

While in New York we heard the report that Mrs. Roosevelt's butler chose to go on his vacation when the King and Queen visited Hyde Park rather than serve hot dogs to royalty. He is originally British, and, it seems, couldn't be more dignified.

Anne Miner Sets July 14

Miss Anne Woodin Miner, daughter of Mrs. Woodin Miner, of New York and East Hampton, Long Island, and granddaughter of Mrs. William Woodin, widow of the former Secretary of the Treasury, has chosen July 14 as the date of her marriage to William Hamilton Phipps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Eugene Phipps, of Englewood, N. J. The ceremony will take place in the Presbyterian Church at East Hampton.

Miss Mary Grace Harris will be maid of honor and the other attendants will include the Misses Mary Harvey, a cousin; Louise Farrell, Mary Halsey, Frances Kilpatrick, Genevieve Phipps, Mary Pinchot, Jeanne Poillon and Elizabeth Wheeler.

A reception will take place at Dune House, the summer home of Mrs. Woodin.

Albert Heimbergs On Wedding Trip

Now on their wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heimberg will make their home at 103 Kennedy street in Washington.

At a ceremony attended only by the members of the immediate family and very close friends, the former Miss Rita Steinman, daughter of Mrs. Ida Steinman, of this city, and Mr. Heimberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Heimberg, of Elizabeth, N. J., were married on Sunday. Rabbi Harry Silverstone officiated at the 12:30 ceremony which took place in the Supper Club of the Shoreham Hotel.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Abraham Slan, the bride wore a gown of pink silk jersey with blue accessories and a corsage of white orchids. Miss Irene Steinman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and only attendant. Irvin Livshin, of this city, was best man.

Tea to Honor Miss Merrill

Miss Rosemary Merrill, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, who made her bow to Washington society recently at a large tea given by her parents, will be feted at a tea given by her aunt, Mrs. Thomas S. Harris, in Lowell, Mass., on Monday, June 26.

The party will take place at Mrs. Harris' home in Nesmith street. Assisting at the event will be Miss Emily P. Rice, of Hamilton, Mass.; Miss Nancy Parker and Miss Muriel Harris, of Lowell, and Mrs. Warren G. Reed and Mrs. Russell Richardson.

Asheville's Climate Lures D. C. Visitors

Dr. Bartsch-Dunne Among Those Visiting There in June

A number of Washingtonians have been enjoying the June weather in Asheville, N. C., "The Land of the Sky," recently; while several North Carolinians have been visiting here.

Dr. Anna Bartsch-Dunne, of Washington, has returned home after a visit with Mrs. Nelson R. Perry, summer resident at The Manor.

Randolph Cooner recently returned home from Washington where he has been the guest of his mother, Mrs. B. R. Cooner, and is now on his way to Pensacola, Fla., where he will join the air training division of the United States Naval Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bell, of Washington and St. Petersburg, Fla., have arrived to spend their tenth summer in Asheville.

Miss Margot Ann Schwarz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Schwarz, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who was married last Friday to William Parsons Jordan, son of Mrs. Samuel Calvert Jordan and the late Mr. Jordan, of Washington, are now motoring through the Blue Ridge Mountains. They will make their home at Brevard, N. C., where Mr. Jordan is connected with a paper company.

The bride attended New York University. Mr. Jordan, a native North Carolinian, received his early education in Charlotte and then attended George Washington University.

C. J. Zellners On Honeymoon

Ensign and Mrs. Charles J. Zellner, whose marriage took place at Fort Myer chapel June 14, will make their home at Philadelphia after August 1. They are now on a short wedding trip. Later, Mrs. Zellner will visit relatives in Georgia and Florida while her husband is stationed on the U. S. S. Wyoming.

The bride, who was Miss Virginia Sue Shumway, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Shumway, formerly of Denver and now of Arlington.

The 5 o'clock wedding took place with Chaplain Zimmerman officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length gown of white chiffon with a small white turban and a short face veil, and a corsage of white roses and baby's breath showered with lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Albert Scoles, of Coronado, Calif., sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Miss Myra Louise Shumway, 14-year-old sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Lieut. Albert B. Scoles, U. S. N., was best man. Following the wedding there was a small reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Lieut. Seaman Sails For France Tomorrow

Lieut. Jonathan Seaman, better known to his many friends here as Jack Seaman, will sail tomorrow for station in France.

He arrived in Washington several days ago and has been the guest of his parents, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. A. Owen Seaman, at their home, 1870 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Lieut. Seaman recently has been stationed at Fort Sill, Okla., and came here from there by motor. Formerly he was at Fort Myer and served as a White House aide.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and her daughter, Miss Jean Wallace, have gone to Iowa, where they will spend most of the summer at their home near Des Moines.

Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, wife of Senator Barkley, with her two grandsons, William and Peter Truitt, have gone to the former's home at Paducah, Ky., for the summer. The Senator has with him his daughter, Mrs. Max O. Truitt, who will leave with him for Paducah when Congress adjourns.

Representative Frank H. Buck, of Vacaville, Calif., has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park until the end of the Congressional season.

Guillaume Georges-Picot, former First Secretary of the French Embassy in China, and Mme. Georges-Picot, are spending several days in Washington and are at the Shoreham. They will tour the United States before returning to Paris, where M. Georges-Picot has been ordered for duty.

William R. Castle, former Assistant Secretary of State, and his grandsons, David and Donald Winslow, of Washington, who has been vacationing in Bermuda, returned to New York yesterday. Mr. Castle will go on to Boston for a brief stay before returning to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd D. Richardson entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening in honor of Mrs. Richardson's sister, Mrs. Mary M. Russell, and her sons, William and Joseph Russell, of Iowa City, Iowa, and Miss Arleen Frentress of Hartford, Conn., who are visiting them for several days.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Sees "Ideal Girl" on Street Car; Haunted by Her Image, His Appetite Gone, He Arraigns Society

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I saw a swell looking girl on a trolley car late this afternon—the second I've seen in the six months I have been in this city. I even got up and gave an elderly woman my seat, so that I might have a better look at the girl; and so that she might see me. The girl was tall and serene, with a warm, bright flicker behind her cool gray eyes. The fine, planes of her face, the lovely paleness, were marred by no greasy imitation blushes. The color of her lips seemed to rise from her heart. She looked at me directly from beneath the wide brim of her Panama; then, tilting her head, she stole a covert and perhaps disappointed glance at my folded, 5-cent magazine.

Four hundred ingenious remarks were conceived in my mind and died stillborn on my tongue. Such is prudence. I remained on the car two stops beyond my own, in the hope that some provident disaster might make us fellow sufferers; or permit me to rescue the girl, although I would be doing her an injustice if I failed to report that she looked entirely capable of rescuing herself from any catastrophe. At any rate, no disaster occurred and she disembarked and swiftly transferred to a waiting bus, bound for some suburban destination that is only a name to me.

And that was the end; the end of the world, practically, for me. I scarcely touched my supper . . . Defend if you can, my dear Mary Haworth, a civilization in which such things can occur—unnecessary starvation and such doleful partings as ours of this afternoon; partings that are not "such sweet sorrow," because partings for which there is never another day.

FORSAKEN.

Plaintiff at Fault

DEAR FORSAKEN: Realistically evaluated, the sickly sentimentality of your bootless reverie built, in this instance, around the image of a passing stranger, constitutes more of an indictment of your own social competence than it does of the unwritten rules governing social interchange in Western society. Speaking of "the civilization in which such things can occur,"—it has been said that the degree of the individual's civilization is commensurate with his ability to make a healthful adjustment to the society in which he lives.

The person whose imagination is unduly quickened by the provocative magnetism of a passing stranger and who bogs down into maudlin, highly colored reverie in consequence, is, without question, a person who deals habitually with shadows, rather than with substance. Undoubtedly he lives, in imagination, more intimately with odd-and-sundry characters who people the fiction to be found in 5-cent magazines, than he does with his neighbors, acquaintances and workaday associates. With pathetic naivete, he accepts such stories as faithful excerpts from life itself, completely innocent of the fact that they are the fictionist's own blithe "escape from reality,"—his tongue-in-cheek version of life as he suspects the dreamers would like it to be.

If you were a realist, instead of a fiction-fed romanticist, you would not have been so despairingly unhorsed by your fleeting encounter with The Girl in The Panama. On the contrary, you would have been pleased with the tangible evidence she afforded that there does exist, in this prosaic world, women whose appearance and deportment measure up to your ideal of feminine perfection. For you say that she is "the second such girl you have seen in the six months you have been in this city."

One of the more profitable aspects of realistic social experience is the affirmation it sometimes affords the dauntless idealist, that the world's population does embrace at least a few individuals who do make answer, in spirit and in appearance, to his fondest expectations of his fellowmen. Yet chance glimpses, like yours on the trolley car, may supply the same encouragement (if greatly diluted) to the person whose erstwhile social experience has been so limited as to deny him first-hand contact with those whom he could truly call his own kind.

Since you are now living in a city where, twice in the space of half a year, your inward-gazing notice has been sharply challenged by some stranger feminine personality who inspired you with a desperate longing to know her as friend, it seems to me that you have proof that your sentimental doldrums are mostly self-induced. I think they may be attributed to lack of social initiative rather than to any lack of potentially satisfactory companionship.

I think you may justifiably assume that the girl who heads in the same direction, on the same public conveyance, at the same home-going hour as yourself, is a person whose life pattern itself is probably comparable, in other aspects, to your own. It follows, therefore, that the logical course of action, leading perchance to acquaintanceship with that very girl, or at least, with others like her—girls who would make an equally vivid imprint upon your imagination—lies in exploring the social opportunities of your immediate environment, both in the neighborhood of your home and at your place of business. Continual mawkish disappointment lies in wait for the person whose romantic satisfactions are sought in 5-cent fiction and in morbid reveries.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Woman's Page.

On the fairway? About the clubhouse? Oh, it's all the same to this new Carlton "Thorobred." In other words, this cool oxford of unlined white bucko, tan-trimmed, perforated thru, with comfortable, flexible nap sole and built-up heel with rubber lift is equally "right" for spectator or active sportswear.

For Fiesta Days

The most lush vegetation ever to sprout on fabric appears above in the button-on skirt and neckline facing of the Indian-head play suit. Arnotex made this brilliantly colored material after an expedition around the Americas which inspired such motifs as tomatoes, squash, beans and golden maize, staff of life for all the Americas. This is one of a group of exciting Pan-Ameri-Go prints taken straight from our native soil

Print Designs of Native Origin Appear on Play Clothes

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

FASHION takes its inspiration from the oddest places. This time it was the newspaper. Yes, the power of the press helped put the new Pan-Ameri-Go prints' break into print. Pan-American good will had been so boomed by the press last winter that Arnotex, a group of New York designers, went south to see whether these republics really had what it takes sartorially. The result was a vivid collection of vivacious all-American fashions, inspired by all the remote places most of us have only dreamed of. A local store now has these fashions.

MARSHALL ADAMS

Peru was explored, and Guatemala, with its Mayan Indians. Even the great Southwest of this country was combed for fresh ideas. These themes were eventually conveyed to dresses, play suits, shorts, jackets, shirts and beach coats or smocks. They have been designed with all the freshness of outlook and energy of color that only aboriginal America can awaken in an artist's heart.

These authentic Pan-Ameri-Go symbols have been printed on Indian head, a durable North American cotton which has been treated to a permanent finish, fast colored and sanforized shrunk for resistance against hard wear. Indian Head as a native fabric has quite as interesting a pedigree as these new Americana prints which pattern them. In 1831, during the Presidency of Andrew Jackson, this cotton was given its name from the town of Indian Head, which was so called because of a big Indian's head carved on an oak by the Indians themselves, warning the settlers to watch their step with the red man—or else.

The symbols, spattered on these now streamlined Indian Head cottons are truly symbolic of the red man's desire to possess. They symbolize heat, rain, golden maize, etc. For instance, there is the Hopigo rain pattern on an overall taken from the Pueblo Indians. It is a rythmically jagged stripe in electric color contrasts. Pana-maize, the print photographed here, represents Indian corn, the life blood of verdant Pan America, through its sunny vegetant pattern.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 19.

THIS is the time of year when the privileged traveling public clambers aboard the big skiffs and off for foreign parts. A survey of the sailing situation shows me that the war rumors of the spring have put a dent in the normal travel trade for Europe. Maybe the whole thing is a big plot by Uncle Grover Whalen to direct the Paris-bound people to our show grounds in Flushing.

Steamship officials say that owing to the comparative calm of the past few weeks, the situation has bettered from their point of view, and that customers are again lining up with the ticket money. But the fact remains that passport applications fell off a goodish 50 per cent this spring from last year's figures.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—If you note the little girls along Broadway with smiles, these days, it merely means that there are hopes for some jobs—none too plentiful these times. Georgie White is producing another "Scandals" after a long lapse, and the chorus call has gone out. Hundreds of baby dolls answered. But as the good book says, many called, few chosen. . . .

THE PRETTY cashiers and guides at the Fair are hopping up and down these days, having heard that Clark Gable and Carole Lombard are to spend part of their belated honeymoon at the show. That is, as soon as Gable finishes his Rhett Butler chore in "Gone with the Typhoon."

"NOW I CAN WEAR A BATHING SUIT THIS SUMMER!"

Just Look At the Fat I've Lost!

When summer rolls around, you don't want to look like a fat, roly-poly, something-or-other. Modern swim suits call for a slim, trim figure—not a gross, fat one. Slim down that unshapely figure of yours now. Just eat sensibly and take 4 Marmola Tablets a day, according to the directions.

Marmola Tablets have been sold to the public for more than thirty years. More than twenty million boxes have been distributed during that period.

Marmola is not intended as a cure-all for all ailments. This advertisement is intended only for fat persons who are normal and healthy otherwise and whose fatness is caused by a reduction in the secretion from the thyroid gland (hypo-thyroidism) with accompanying subnormal metabolic rates. No other representation is made as to this treatment except under these conditions and according to the dosage as recommended.

We do not make any diagnosis as that is the function of your physician, who must be consulted for that purpose. The formula is included in every package. Start with Marmola today and win the slender lovely figure that is rightfully yours.

Sour Cream Adds An Extra Tang To Fruit Pie

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

FRESH-FRUIT MONTHS mean that we can't talk of pies too much. For a fresh berry pie or a fresh peach one just sweeps along all guests, family members or casual visitors. If you don't know what a luscious extra tang sour cream adds to a fruit pie, you've missed the modern idea of heavenly food. Here's an open-faced peach pie that will do honor to the finest meals. Peaches have made their appearance in the markets and very soon they will be along in profusion.

Peach Sour Cream Pie

Mix 1 cup zwieback crumbs, 1-3 cup melted butter and 1-3 cup of sugar together and press on the sides and bottom of a pie tin. Beat 2 eggs slightly, add 1 cup thick sour cream, few grains of salt and another 1-3 cup of sugar and mix well. Add 2 cups sliced fresh peaches and pour into the pie shell. Bake in a moderate oven, 325 degrees, for about 1 hour or until the custard is set. Serve warm or cold.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Mrs. DeGoofey 'Commences'

It's Dr. DeGoofey now! The celebrated founder and president of the Do Something About It League let the cat out of the bag when she received members of her press conference yesterday wearing a cap and gown.

Mrs. De Goofey

"While I am greatly averse to personal publicity," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "I feel that in the interests of my cause I should make public the fact that I have just been awarded by Spoofem University the honorary degree of doctor of reform. By the way, have the photographers arrived? . . . No? . . . Well, while we are waiting I will distribute these mimeographed sheets on which you will find full account of my ancestry, history and achievements.

"Another thing, please note that my full name is Henrietta Gabberwaite DeGoofey—with only one 'f' in Goofey. As you can see on the sheet, I go back to Oscar the Gabber, who, of course, came over to England with William the Conqueror. Now, while I can trace my ancestry back much further—in fact to Charlemagne, Alexander the Great—and there is one branch of our family that goes back to Adam—I feel it would be unnecessary at this time to do so. After all I am a woman who stands on my own feet."

"How will this recognition affect your reform plans, Dr. DeGoofey?" asked a political reporter.

Not to Lose Her Femininity

"Just call me 'Mrs. DeGoofey,' please. I shall not use my title except on very formal occasions. As you know a great deal of my reform work is with men and I feel that for a woman to be known as 'Dr. So-and-So' definitely robs her of glamour.

"Now as to my plans. First I hope to overhaul and simplify commencements. I have attended a great many of these events in the last few weeks and as a result had to repair to a hospital for several days' rest. There I met scores of other commencement victims similarly recuperating. Now I am going to seek legislation making it a felony for commencement invitations to be sent to any persons other than members of the immediate families of the graduates."

"Is the report true, Mrs. DeGoofey, that you are going to abolish the commencement address?" asked a police reporter.

"No indeed. Not the address—but its public delivery. My plan is to have all these addresses sent in to Congress, printed in the Congressional Record and mailed at the taxpayers' expense to all graduates."

"But what about the commencement program, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a club editor. "Surely you will at least have some good music . . . some harp solos or piano duets——"

"Certainly not! I am going to turn the commencements entirely back to the graduates and their families. The graduates themselves will furnish all the entertainment—sing, play, dance, yodel, read essays, etc.

Papa and Mama To Parade

"Then I expect to give the parents a break in a big way. When the graduates go to the platform to receive their diplomas, their families will march with them. What is a commencement for but to give the home folks a kick?"

"Any other reforms, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a pet editor.

"One more. I shall start a movement at once for some new honorary degress. A great many deserving women are being neglected by our colleges. For instance, why should we have a doctor of laws and not a doctor of glamour when we have the greatest number of bathing beauties of any country in the world? Why should we have a doctor of science and not a doctor of society when in this very city hundreds of women who were once social nobodies have by their own aggressiveness and persistence climbed to impregnable positions among the cave dwellers? Why should we have a doctor of philosophy and not a doctor of clubs when thousands of women spend their lives fluting nut cups, making reports and passing resolutions? Why should we not have—oh, but I see the photographers have arrived! . . .

Wool Takes Stellar Role in Fall Fashions

Wool has the stellar role in fashions for fall. Suits still hold the spotlight, and 95 out of 100 are wool. Women's tailors are the busiest people in Paris at the moment, for every woman wants her wardrobe to be prepared for possible emergencies with a presentable, practical wool suit. For sports and morning wear, tweed types are well to the fore, with the choice falling on close weaves, small designs like checks, with an occasional touch of plaid for gaiety, and lots of patternless, mannish materials, such as Shetlands and homespuns.

Probers Aver D. C. Coddles Wild Drivers

Advisory Council's Preliminary Findings Pave Way for Thorough Inquiry

By Howard F. Wentworth

A thorough inquiry into local methods of prosecuting motorists responsible for traffic accidents was projected yesterday by the enforcement committee of the commissioners' traffic advisory council, it was learned last night.

Striking at the existing system of permitting reckless and negligent drivers to escape punishment through damage payments and out-of-court settlements, the committee, headed by Harry S. Wender, local lawyer, prepared to launch an investigation by calling together local enforcement, court and traffic authorities for a "cards on the table" meeting next week.

Too Much Leniency Charged

A preliminary inquiry by the committee Wender said, revealed that numerous drivers accused of negligence in accident cases have gone free—even in the face of serious injuries—when summoned before the police court corporation counsel's office for a hearing.

He cited instances where cases have been continued for further hearings and then dismissed because the parties involved "got together" and settled their differences—financial and personal.

In calling for the committee investigation, Wender declared:

"It is evident that every chance is given the parties involved in accidents to compose their differences without the necessity of a trial, despite the fact that their presence in the Police Court Corporation Counsel's office is the result of an actual accident, resulting in serious injury to an individual or damage to an auto or both."

Procedure Assailed

The committee pointed out that there is "apparently no responsibility upon the police and prosecuting officers to see to it that persons guilty of law violations are forced to stand trial regardless of the feelings of the injured parties—whose wishes may depend largely upon whether or not settlement of a satisfactory financial nature has resulted from the accident."

In cases of the type under fire, it was further pointed out, policemen are not witnesses and decision to prosecute the driver responsible rests solely with the other party involved. It is ostensibly the function of the corporation counsel assigned to hear facts in the case to decide upon a charge—providing the evidence warrants court action.

"But," said Wender, "even after testimony before the corporation counsel, which is not sworn to by the witnesses, no effort is made to hold any of the parties unless it be the desire of the complaining witness, himself, that a complaint be filed. When the witnesses are ordered to appear for trial at a future date, they are informed that in the event the complaining witness changes his mind and decides not to prosecute, there will be no trial."

In this way, Wender told the committee, thousands of persons responsible for accidents are "allowed to continue as a menace upon the streets of Washington."

Holds Situation Is a "Pity"

"In a city attempting with little success to rid its highways of preventable mishaps, it is a pity that no encouragement at all is given to the conscientious citizen who wishes to prosecute an offender," Wender said.

He estimated that scores of motorists responsible for serious crashes are driving District streets without "a single blot on their traffic record."

The committee also assailed inconsistent speed-limit signs throughout the city and urged immediate corrective measures.

Capital News In Brief

Purse-Snatchers Pursued

A courageous woman last night chased and attempted to capture two purse thieves as she and two other District women were robbed of $70.

Her pocketbook, containing $20, snatched from her as she walked in the 6100 block of Third street northwest, Mrs. Louis Mitchell, 37, of 315 Rittenhouse street northwest, turned on two youths and pursued them for more than a block. They escaped down an alley.

Miss Anne Donnelly, of 1601 Argonne place northwest, was robbed of $35 by a colored man as she walked in the 1400 block of Harvard street northwest, and Mrs. Dorothy Moran, of 1028 Connecticut avenue northwest, of $15 by two men in the 2500 block of Q street northwest.

Boy, 6, Falls On 11,000-Volt Wire and Lives

The thin rubber sole of a tennis shoe spelled the margin between electrocution and minor burns for a 6-year-old District boy when he fell partially across a high-voltage power wire from a railroad overpass yesterday.

MULLOY

With several playmates Kenneth Mulloy was walking across the railroad bridge that spans the Pennsylvania tracks near his home at Tenth street and Maryland avenue southwest, when one of them "dared" him to walk on the narrow stone railing.

Accepting the challenge, Kenneth clambered up on the railing but lost his balance and toppled over onto a corrugated roofing that slopes down to within 6 inches of high-tension power wires.

As related to his father, Frank P. Mulloy, a Navy Yard employe, Kenneth slid down to the edge of the roof and clutched at the narrow "angle iron" fringe to keep from plunging 40 feet to the tracks below.

Uncommonly strong for his age, Kenneth managed to grasp and hold on to the rim but as he slid down his foot caught on a wire carrying 11,000 volts. A blackened scar, burned into the rubber sole which insulated Kenneth from a flaming death, testified to the narrow escape.

Passersby and a policeman attracted by the flames that shot up from the heavily charged wire rushed to the boy's assistance. Kenneth, however, climbed unaided up the corrugated roofing and over the wall to safety.

After treatment at Providence Hospital for first degree burns Kenneth, who is a kindergarten student at Fairbrother School, told his father he "guessed he wouldn't do any more climbing—for a while, any way."

'Last' Drink Foils Leap Off Span by Would-Be Suicide

A last drink of water was the inducement used last night by A. S. Miller, a guard on the Memorial Bridge, to foil a 27-year-old would-be suicide's leap into the Potomac.

Miller stood for 20 minutes in the pouring rain watching the man pace nervously back and forth on the span. The stranger finally approached Miller and asked, "Will you please go inside your office. I want to jump off."

Miller offered the young man a "last" glass of water instead. Although drenched, the man accepted. While his guest was drinking, Miller called the police, who took the man to Gallinger for observation.

Baltimore Conference Announces 49 Pastoral Changes In This Area

Forty-nine pastoral changes, including 17 in the Washington District, were announced at yesterday's closing sessions of the 155th and last meeting of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The adjournment at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church brought about the beginning of a new existence for the Baltimore Conference, which joined with the Methodist Protestants and Southern Methodists through the unification of the three groups in Kansas City last month. A joint local gathering of the united group is slated for the fall.

Reading the new appointments, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes advised the ministers to "be careful not to carry our old feelings into the new relations so as to mar that relation."

Washington Transfers

Washington proper.—F. Y. Jaggers succeeds John E. Fort at Anacostia, Fort becoming pastor at Washington Square, Md., while Walter F. Atkinson will be replaced at Dumbarton by L. G. Davis. E. B. Wilcox, of Falls Church, becomes pastor of Trinity Methodist in place of Dan E. Ennis, who goes to Elderslie, Md. Atkinson goes to Kinsley, Md.

Clarkson R. Banes becomes pastor at Waugh Methodist Church, replacing A. F. Poore, who has been assisting the regular pastor, Dr. A. H. McKinley, who is being retired for physical disability.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., June 19.—The committee on moral reform of the Maryland annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church assailed county-controlled liquor dispensaries today and called for a renewed fight against the "iniquitous liquor traffic."

The conference, the 111th, ended today in services marking its dissolution, for under the new United Methodist Church it will be included under the Baltimore conference.

Turning to divorce, the committee deplored "the modern tendency to condone divorce, and to so relax the restrictions against it as to make it less difficult to obtain. We regret that the church in general, and the Methodist Church in particular, seems to be moving away from its traditional position on this question."

Following is a list of ministerial appointments:

Washington—Alexandria, Norman Roberts, supply; Calvary, T. G. Betschler; Cherrydale, H. E. Hudgins; Congress Street, H. A. Kester; Fairfax, W. J. Nease; First Church, A. F. Raum; Lewis Memorial, J. A. Trader; Mount Olivet, K. K. Haddaway; Mount Tabor, W. K. Lyons; North Carolina Avenue, R. W. White; Walker's Chapel and Fort Myer Heights, G. L. Pickel; Wesley Chapel of Kent, J. C. 300 Night School Pupils Get Diplomas

American Citizenship Is Blessed Possession, Miss Earlene White Tells Graduates

From seven District night schools 300 seniors marched into the McKinley High School auditorium last night to receive diplomas and certificates from Harold Clark, head of the Department of Vocational Education of the District of Columbia.

They were urged to carry with them through their lives "a sense of the real meaning of American citizenship, the real privilege of living in this country of ours" by Miss Earlene White, postmistress of the United States Senate and president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Wishing the graduates good luck in their careers, Miss White offered them "as a graduation present the four-leafed clover of success." The four leaves were ambition, vision, effort, and persistence, she explained, while the stem that held them together was knowledge.

Harold Lanson Tallman, president of the senior high school, declared in a farewell address that "we know what we want and we are certain we are on the right road."

Carlos Martins, president of the elementary class, gave a brief address of welcome to the 800 friends of the graduates at the exercises, and the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, delivered the invocation and benediction. E. J. Lockwood, director of evening and summer schools, presided.

(The list of graduates appeared in Sunday's issue.)

Johnson Tells Army to Back Capitalism

Importance of Supply Stressed in Talk at Industrial College

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson urged the Nation's armed forces to "have faith in the capitalist system" as he presented diplomas to the graduating class at the Army Industrial College here yesterday.

Giving ten maxims by which they can best serve their country, Assistant Secretary Johnson advised the officer graduates to hold the capitalist system over "other systems" proposed. "It is the form that has given greater happiness to greater numbers than any other system devised," he declared. "It is worth perpetuating."

Johnson stressed the importance of supply problems in the modern army, and stated that officers reaching high commands in the future must have a "supply background."

Diplomas were presented to 62 officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The list, with one omission, was published in yesterday morning's Post. Inadvertently left out of the group was the name of Commander Ernest L. Patch, Construction Corps, United States Navy.

S. A. Brown, Alumnus On Howard Faculty, Delivers Address

On behalf of the Board of Education, Col. West A. Hamilton presented diplomas last night to 314 graduates of Dunbar High School, at commencement exercises held in the auditorium of the institution. Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, presided. The address to graduates was made by an alumnus, Sterling A. Brown, of Howard Universitw faculty.

Walter A. Smith, principal, announced awards of doctorates to recent alumni as follows: Herman Branson, physics, University of Cincinnati; Hilda Lawson, English, University of Illinois; Stanton Wormley, English and German, Cornell.

American Legion awards were presented to Zelma Malone and John Hurst as outstanding students; the College Alumnae Scholarship, $200, to Theresa Berry; the James E. Walker Memorial medal to Harold Jennifer; the Anna J. Costin scholarship to Hazel Daniel; the Dunbar Alumni Association scholarship, $125, to Charlotte Pinkett with Samuel Bullock as alternate; the Harvard book award to Harry Lynch.

Ben Parran, Father of Surgeon, Dies

Was Active in Md. Farm Organizations; Funeral Tomorrow

Benjamin Parran, 84, father of the United States Surgeon General, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard L. Silvester, 3140 Klingle road northwest. He had been ill several months.

Benjamin Parran began to ride in his early 'teens, and, even as a middle-aged man, was a formidable competitor in Calvert County's annual "jousting tournament." In recent years the tourney's climax has come when Mr. Parran stepped forward to present to the winning horseman the Parran Cup, "dedicated to the tournament-riding sons of Thomas Parran." He saw his first jousting as a lad of 6, he liked to recall.

Patriarch of a widely known southern Maryland family, Mr. Parran spent all his life on Parrot's Cage, the family farm near St. Leonards, Md., in Calvert County. The Parran family has been associated with Calvert County since 1650.

Mr. Parran was active in the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association and the Farm Bureau Federation. He was a member of Christ Church, St. Leonard's.

He was the eldest of 12 brothers and sisters, 7 of whom survive. They are Thomas Parran, former Representative from Maryland; State Senator John Parran, J. Franklin and Archibald Parran, Mrs. Thomas Bond, Mrs. Arthur Harkness and Mrs. Alexander Somerville, all of Calvert County. His wife, the former Mary Latimer, died several years ago.

Besides Surgeon General Thomas Parran and Mrs. Silvester, Mr. Parran leaves a son, Benjamin Parran, jr., and Mrs. Thomas B. Mackall, both of Calvert County.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Christ Church. Burial is to be in the family plot at Christ Church.

Police 'Mopped' Up

Police filled the downtown intersection at Fifteenth street and New York avenue last night when the National Savings & Trust Co. burglar alarm went off.

The "culprit" was a charwoman whose mop accidentally brushed the alarm mechanism, police said.

C. I. O. Assails King Income Tax Proposal

Labor Council Backs House Bill, but Asks Higher Exemptions

The draft of the income tax bill sent to Senator King by Jo V. Morgan, of the Board of Tax Appeals, yesterday afternoon, was condemned last night by the Industrial Union Council of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at a meeting in the United Federal Workers Hall, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

The bill, which would lower exemptions to $500 for single and $1,500 for unmarried persons, was branded "an attempt to frighten working-class support for a progressive income tax," in a resolution adopted by the council.

House Bill Indirsed

Reaffirming its stand in favor of a progressive income tax and against any form of sales tax, the council indorsed in principle the District Revenue bill as passed by the House, but urged that the exemption rate be raised to the Federal level.

William W. Rodgers, president of the council and of the Washington Newspaper Guild, presided.

Hopes for Strike Peace

A spokesman for the District's 1,000 striking carpenters told The Post last night he had high hopes for a strike settlement at a meeting of carpenters' and contractors' representatives with Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, at 2 p. m. today.

It was learned at the same time that 32 contractors, most of them engaged in private construction, have signed separate wage agreements with the union.

Wage demands of striking union construction laborers were indorsed by the Central Labor Union meeting last night.

Dr. Swormstedt Honored on 86th Birthday

A gathering of distinguished Washington physicians, friends and associates dined and danced at the Raleigh Hotel last night in tribute to an old-time "horse and buggy" doctor.

Recipient of the honor at a banquet given by the Alumnae Association of the Homeopathic Hospital School of Nursing was Dr. Lyman Beecher Swormstedt, for 62 years a practicing physician in Washington, whose eighty-sixth birthday was yesterday.

More than 150 persons attended the banquet, at which speakers traced the career of one of the city's oldest physicians and lavished praise on Dr. Swormstedt for his long devotion to Homeopathic, where he has been a staff member since June 10, 1881.

He was remembered as the designer of the nursing school's first class pin and as a token of this remembrance Mrs. Elizabeth M. Jackson, association president, gave him a basket of red roses.

Dr. Gregg Custis Birdsall, whose father graduated from college at "about the same time" as the doctor, presented the gathering a word picture of the young Dr. Swormstedt who first came to the District in 1877.

He was a man, he said, with a luxuriant and flowing beard who wore a frock coat and drove a high-stepping horse, and who began to practice in the "horse and buggy days" almost at the beginning of the history of the homeopathic profession.

Dr. Swormstedt, he recalled, practiced medicine in the "transition period, when typhoid and cause of diphtheria were unknown, when there were no stethoscopes, blood pressures or X-rays, when physicians had practically nothing to work with . . . yet they got wonderful results."

Dr. Swormstedt kept abreast of developments and as the years passed remained an alert, modern physician, Dr. Birdsall said.

Similar speeches were made by Fred McKee, president of the board of hospital trustees, and Dr. John A. Swarthwout, one of the youngest members of the staff. Mrs. Janette Kobb outlined the hospital's history, and Dr. J. H. Branson, whose wife was a member of the first class, read a poem.

The list of diners included Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Shapiro, Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Baker, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Shearer, Dr. and Mrs. Carden Warner, Dr. George Trible, Dr. William F. King, Dr. Mary Brosius, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Notes, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Qualey, Dr. Tomas Cajigas, Dr. and Mrs. Calhoun Sterling, Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Pedrick, Dr. Ernest Sappington and Mrs. Clarence Dodge, president of the women's board.

John Henry Lewis Dethroned as Champion

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Action Follows Physician's Announcement That John Henry Is 'Practically Blind In Left Eye;' Lewis Says He Will Quit Ring

"The world's light heavyweight championship yesterday was declared vacant as the National Boxing Association dethroned John Henry Lewis, 25-year-old colored title-holder, with the ruling that he has not defended his title within the required six months and is "practically blind in his left eye."

This action followed announcement of the results of Lewis' physical examination last week by a board of three medical officers. The colored fighter's last title fight was with Al Gainer in October, 1938.

The physicians' report stated vision in Lewis' left eye is impaired by a cataract, but they recommended that he be allowed to continue fighting.

Dr. J. Everett McClenehan, of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, one of the examing physicians, however, stated that there is "no question that further participation in boxing on the part of Lewis would subject his right eye, now normal, to the possibility of a similar injury."

It's for the Best

In declaring Lewis' title vacant, however, the N. B. A. officials said they had in mind "Lewis' physical well being" and also the good of the boxing game.

A charge that "the cards were stacked" against Lewis followed the N. B. A.'s action. In Pittsburgh, Gus Greenlee, manager of Lewis, asserted that "some pressure was put on the N. B. A."

The dethroned champion did not "take the decision hard," Greenlee said, adding Lewis was "sorry he didn't resign first," according to Associated Press reports.

Will Enter Business

Lewis, who had contended that his present eye condition has existed for several years, had entered an earnest plea that he be allowed to continue fighting. He said, however, he now plans to go to Oakland, Calif., and go in business.

With Lewis' title vacant, the N. B. A. has announced it will recognize as a world's championship fight for the light heavyweight championship a match between Melio Bettina, recognized in New York as champion, and one of five opponents:

The contenders for the title are listed by the N. B. A. in order, as Gus Lennevitch, of Cliffside, N. J.; the winner of the Jock McAvoy-Lon Harvey match in England; Dave Clark, of Detroit; Ron Richards, of Australia, and Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh.

Announcement of the Lewis dethronement was made by Col. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, and an N. B. A. official, at the direction of N. B. A. President Charles F. Reynolds.

Ailing Since 1935

Lewis, said to have suffered the eye ailment since before he won the championship by outpointing Bob Olin in 15 rounds in St. Louis in 1935, was knocked out in one round by Joe Louis, world's heavyweight king, last winter in New York. That was his last fight.

Commenting on the physicians' recommendation that Lewis be allowed to continue fighting, the N. B. A. recalled the careers of such fighters as Harry Grebb, Pete Her-

Riggs, Austin, Cooke Win in London Play

By the Associated Press

London, June 19.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, advanced to the second round of the Queens Club tennis tournament by default today while Don McNeill, fellow countryman from Oklahoma City, who upset him for the French title last week, withdrew from singles competition to rest for the opening of Wimbledon next Monday.

Survivors along with Riggs were England's H. W. (Bunny) Austin, back to defend his title after several weeks in America, and Baron Gottfried von Cramm, former German player.

Austin defeated W. K. Lavarack of the Queens Club, 6—4, 6—2, after a shaky start. Von Cramm first beat turbanded Indian Singh Sahib, 6—0, 6—1, and then turned back S. G. Xydis, of Greece, 6—1, 6—1.

Browns Beat Nats in 14th, 2-1; Lose, 6-1

Laabs' Hit Decides Opener; Krakky Takes Nightcap

By Shirley Povich.

Victims of a 14-inning pitching masterpiece by Vernon Kennedy in the opening number of a double-header program, the Nats battled into the dusk yesterday and averted the humiliation of a twin defeat by the St. Louis Browns. They won the second game, 6 to 1, after dropping the opener, 2-1.

Darkness called a halt to the second-game proceedings after seven and one-half innings, and the score reverted to the seventh. It was a triumph for Joe Krakauskas, his first mound victory in nearly two months.

But their second-game success could hardly compensate the Nats for their first-game setback in which they wasted nine innings of scoreless pitching by Dutch Leonard with a great show of futility against Kennedy. It was a ball game worthy of a World Series setting as Kennedy and Leonard engaged in a classic duel, with neither club scoring until the tenth, when the Browns took a 1-0 lead and the Nats tied the score.

For Kennedy, it was a superb triumph, over both Leonard and Pete Appleton, who pitched the last four innings for the Nats. Kennedy

Rain Delays Abrams Fight Until Tonight

Georgie 6-5 Favorite Over Former Champ; Bouts Begin at 8:30

Rain—the old nemesis of Promoter Joe Turner—forced postponement of last night's 10-round fight between Georgie Abrams and Lou Brouillard at Griffith Stadium, but the entire card, beginning at 8:30, will be presented tonight.

Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn—badgered by rain throughout the outdoor fight season last summer—were going about muttering to themselves after a last-minute postponement.

A brisk advance ticket sale has been registered, they reported, indicating an attendance of 5,000. This figure may be cut or enlarged by the postponement. The fight moguls hope for the latter, for the extra day's expense for the fighters will cut a far from negligible gash in the gate receipts.

Brouillard, former middleweight and welterweight champion, weighed in yesterday at the District Boxing Commission at 157½ pounds, while Abrams weighed in at 160¼. Both boys finished their training with light sessions Sunday, and the extra day's rest is expected to bring them even closer to fighting "edge," it was said.

Wooderson Inclined To Forget Dispute

Briton Terms Collision 'Unfortunate Accident—Best Forgotten;' Pictures Fail To Show Deliberate Foul by Rideout

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 19.—Sydney Wooderson was inclined today to let the 1939 Princeton mile pass into history as motion pictures of the event only added fuel to the controversy as to whether he was fouled by Blaine Rideout.

After thinking the matter over, England's little world record holder at a mile called his collision Saturday with Rideout an "unfortunate accident—an accident occurring in the heat of the race which is best forgotten."

The collision, at the top of the homestretch, threw the Englishman off stride and cost him whatever chance he had for victory. Chuck Fenske came up fast to take the race in 4:11 with Wooderson finishing last in the field of five.

Meanwhile, the movies failed to clear up the argument whether Rideout bumped Wooderson or whether the record holder, apparently tired, hit the Texan when he (Wooderson) failed to straighten out in time for the final 200-yard dash to the finish line.

The pictures showed Rideout first passing Fenske shortly before the turn. Then Rideout pulled up even with Wooderson and for a time the two appeared to run shoulder to shoulder. Coming into the turn Rideout, seeking to gain the lead, gradually seemed to crowd Wooderson toward the rail until the Briton half-stumbled and threw up his right arm as if to regain his balance.

Rideout went into the lead only to have Wooderson regain his stride and pass him momentarily. From the angle of the pictures it was difficult to determine whether there actually was bodily contact or whether Wooderson, seeking to avoid such contact, inadvertently stepped on the rail and lost his balance.

Before the two collided, Glenn Cunningham, who finished second 5 yards back of Fenske, also lost his balance when he stepped on the rail. When Wooderson stumbled, Glenn attempted to go through the hole but the Briton's quick recovery blocked him off and he was forced to go around the leaders to make his stretch bid.

Some track experts felt that the mishap, regrettable as it was, had little effect on the final outcome. They pointed out that the little Briton, hailed abroad as the greatest judge of pace since Paavo Nurmi and admittedly aiming at a new record around 4:03, ran the first quarter in the slow time of 64 seconds. This not only cost Wooderson all chance of a new record, but indicated to some experts at least that the English...an was not in shape. Certainly the pace was just what the Americans wanted.

Pictures of the finish also were significant. All four Americans held perfect form, while Wooderson apparently had lost his form, showing signs of sheer exhaustion. In fact, at least one English sports writer expressed the fear before Wooderson ever went to the post that he had "left his race in England," where he set a world record for three-quarters of a mile and ran a 4.07.4 mile.

Tribe, Nats Open Series Here Today

The Cleveland Indians, tied for third place in the American League, move into Griffith Stadium today for the start of a three-game series with the Nats.

Ken Chase, usually effective against the Indians, is expected to be Manager Bucky Harris' pitching choice. In his last start against the Cleveland club, Chase pitched a one-hit game until the ninth when three Cleveland hits, including Hal Trosky's homer, produced two runs and a 2-1 defeat for the Nats.

John Henry Takes Count From Eye Specialist

Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis is shown here as he sat down in Pittsburgh to undergo an eye examination which resulted in his title being declared vacant yesterday by the National Boxing Association. Dr. A. J. Guerinot, eye specialist, is looking at John Henry's eyes. His left eye was found beclouded by a cataract. He will not risk danger of total blindness but will quite the ring for a business career

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Three weeks hence, Connie Mack will peer atop one of the world's few remaining rubber collars, appraise a dugout full of most of the best players in big league baseball, and select the American League's All-Star team. He'll scribble his line-up for the umpires and send his club out on the field to do battle with the National League's best in the seventh annual midsummer afternoon's dream game.

POVICH

Connie Mack was given the job of managing the American League All-Stars at Yankee Stadium on July 11 as a sentimental gesture in this centennial year of baseball. Ordinarily, it would belong to Joe McCarthy, manager of the reigning champions of the league, but somehow the venerable Mack fits better into the centennial scheme. At least the league's big-wigs who selected Mr. Mack for the job were choosing no green pea. It was Connie Mack who managed the first American League All-Stars to victory over the National League in the first All-Star game. That was in 1935.

Mr. Mack will be confronted with little margin for error when he selects his team from the list of 25 players chosen by the league's eight managers. He can make only one mistake. That would be the failure to name Joe DiMaggio as his centerfielder and Bill Dickey as his catcher. They are the only standouts at their positions. At every other position, the athletes are so closely bunched that any choice he may make would be beyond criticism.

First Base Decision Tough

DiMaggio, with his .489 batting average, the finest throwing arm among the league's outfielders, and his ground-covering ability must be Mack's centerfield choice. But no less than Dickey must be his catcher, for the angular backstop of the Yankees towers above his American League contemporaries like the salvage ships tover over the Squalus.

The most delicate choice that Mack may have to make for any position is probably at first base. First off, the name of Hank Greenberg, with his 16 home runs and 50 runs batted in this season, suggests itself. But Greenberg, for all his power stroking, is batting a meager .308, while Jimmy Foxx is showing a .346 batting average, 40 runs batted in and 11 homers to his credit. But the selection of either Greenberg or Foxx would probably draw a squawk from St. Louis and perhaps other sectors.

Because with the Browns is a first baseman who never has come in for his proper share of the kudos. George McQuinn, however, is rapidly proving himself no flash in the pan, and the impression is growing that for two years now he has been the most under-rated player in the league. And McQuinn, a better defensive first baseman than either Greenberg or Foxx, need not blush at his own batting average. It is an extremely healthy .350, which tops both his rivals.

Doerr Presses Gehringer

Charley Gehringer will be Mack's second baseman unless the old gentleman is placing a heavy premium on defense. Gehringer, however, is not the same stand-out at the position that he has been for ten years. Bobby Doerr, of the Red Sox, is his equal on the defense, and young Joe Gordon, of the Yankees, is Gehringer's superior. Doerr at this writing, is batting only three points under Gehringer with his .305 average, and Gordon, a .289 hitter, will give you that long blow.

If it's power that Mack is seeking at his third base job, then he'll chose either Pinky Higgins, of the Tigers, or Ken Keltner, of the Indians, or Buddy Lewis, of the Nats, who are hitting .339, .328, .324, respectively. But if Mack inclines toward smart fielding, Lewis is unquestionably out, and Higgins and Keltner have no profound claim to the job. Mack's choice is apt to be the .305-hitting Red Rolfe.

This is not a year, either, in which the American League manager can point to Joe Cronin and say "there's my shortstop." Mack might do it, but he would be overlooking a fellow who is outhitting Cronin by nearly 50 points—Frank Croucher, of the Tigers. Cronin is having an offyear at bat with his .273 average, but his penchant for rising to the occasion may yet win him the all-star job. In his favor is the fact that Frankie Crosetti, the best fielding shortstop in the league, is batting a mere .214.

Case May Be in There

Which seems to clear up the infield situation, so we move to the outfield, where Mack must pick a couple of guys to flank Joe DiMaggio in center. The first name that suggests itself is that of Myril Hoag, of the Browns, who is leading the league at bat. Hoag's arm and ground-covering ability would be no drawbacks, either. And for his third outfielder, Mack could do worse than George Case, who is rapping at a .314 rate and would look well on the bases that afternoon. The outfielders who are outhitting Case are neither numerous nor in his class on the defense.

There will, of course, have to be some pitchers on the American League side. Their selection should not be difficult. Red Ruffing, Tommy Bridges and Bob Feller who have compiled 27 victories against 5 defeats, should do nicely. There may be a disposition to name Lefty Grove, too, and there could be no squawk at that. In any event, the team that Connie Mack does eventually pick, will be the National League's worry, not his.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 19.—"I'd rather fight Joe Louis than Tony Galento," Lou Nova said to us the other day. We reached over and felt his thick brown forehead, but there seemed to be no fever.

CONSIDINE

"I'm not thinking too much about the dough, either," he quickly added, "though it's about time I should be making better money than I have been making. Maybe I need glamor.

"I honestly think Joe'd be easier to fight than Galento," the Californian repeated, without blinking. "Joe's a boxer. He does things according to the rules. What he does in the ring comes out of a book, and I know those rules, too. So I know what to do about them.

"But Galento . . . How could anybody figure him? He pushes you, butts you, steps on you and gives you the back of his hand, and maybe his lacings, too. I think the fellow would be a lot harder to fight than Louis—though I'm not kidding myself that Louis can't do a lot more damage than Tony could.

"You think I'm nuts, but I can beat Louis. I can knock him out. Of course nobody believes me. Maybe he'll belt me out like he does the others, and then I'll just be another guy who popped off too soon. But in my h eart I know he won't. He can't. I'll tell you why. Who would you rather be hit by—Louis or Baer?"

"Neither," we said with a nervous twitch.

Louis No Whizz Against Youngsters

"I'd rather be hit by Louis, and so would any other fighter. Baer can break a guy's head with a right-hand punch. Well, he didn't break mine, and he hit me enough. If he couldn't knock me out I'm sure Louis can't. And if he can't knock me out I'll be around there long enough to kayo him. He's no whizz against the younger guys, particularly if they can box. I'm no old bum who's going to get out of breath, and who's only looking for a soft spot on the canvas. He can't scare me, with all that sugar at stake."

Nova is a little distressed over his inability to earn the kind of money that went to other up-and-coming challengers. He has knocked out five of his last six opponents, and six out of six if you think he knocked out Tommy Farr in the fourteenth round of their fight. But the gates have been small. His biggest purse was the $10,000 he cleared out of the fight against Baer. A dozen years ago a similar rise in the heavyweight division would have made him a rich young man, but it is doubtful if he has much more today than a good apprentice plumber, burdened as he is with a long series of drains on his income.

"It looks to me as if the way to make a name for yourself, and attract the crowds, is to be a screwball," he reasoned. "Fellow's got to beat his wife, I guess, or raise hell in the saloons, or have some dark mystery about him—to pull the big gates. I'm too darned normal, and I can't do anything about it."

Nova Looks Clumsy, But Isn't

Jim Braddock thinks Nova is pretty good. There's a touch of pardonable biss in there somewhere, because Jim worked with Lou in the Baer fight. But the old battler sounds sensible enough when he says, "Lou looks a lot worse than he really is. That's because there's nothing fancy to him, and there never will be. He can't dance around and look pretty when he's boxing—but what he does he does right. He looks clumsy when he slips a punch, but he slips it, so what the hell's the difference?"

Lou told us he fought a dumb fight against Baer.

"I knew it was dumb, but I was just too stubborn to do differently. Braddock and Carlen, and everybody for that matter, had told me to go out there and outbox Max and take the decision—just as Jim did when he won the title from Baer. But, I dunno. I got it into my bean that I was going to show people I could fight, that I could even knock out a guy as tough as Max. I had to leave myself open a lot to do it, and he hit me some beauts. But I did what I started out to do. That suited me.

"I'll have more sense against Louis. I'll box him. I'll outbox him. I think I'm a smarter fellow than he is. And he can be fooled."

Marion Brown Medalist in District Women's Championship

Manor Club Star Has 80 At Columbia

Mrs. Stern Second; Mrs. Platt, Medley, Kreuzberg All Fail To Make 1st Flight

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Marion Brown's stock in the District Women's Championship jumped sky-high yesterday as the 20-year-old Manor miss started a defense of her city title by winning medalist honors with an 80 at Columbia, two strokes better than the next best effort in the field of 128.

After losing in the second round of the recent Maryland State play, and playing in so-so fashion in the other tournaments this season, the champ really went to work on her game for this event and apparently found it in time. She played near-regulation golf, with no three-putt greens and three one-putters.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern posted an 82 that looked good for medalist honors until Miss Brown arrived with the 80 that stood up for the day. Mrs. Stern paired two nines of 41 for the second best score, that was in turn a pair of shots better than a two-way tie for third.

Mrs. Meckley Scores 84

Mrs. Betty Meckley, a former champion, was out in 43 and back in 41 for an 84, while Mrs. Leo Walper, one of the pretournament choices, had identical nines, also for an 84. Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, had two 43s for an 86, and the Chevy Chase champion, Mrs. Bishop Hill, was the only other player to snap the 90 mark, with a 47, 42—89.

Scores ran higher than expected as the course was heavy from the previous day's rain, but otherwise the day was suited for low scoring. Scores in the upper 90s, too high for the championship flight, included Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase, 96, with three bad holes on the back nine; Mrs. Richard Kreuzberg, Indian Spring, now a week-end golfer, and Mrs. C. P. Medley, a clubmate, all of whom figured to qualify for the title bracket.

Four played off for one place at 95, with Indian Spring's southpaw stylist, Mrs. K. S. Giles, winning on the second extra hole. Mrs. Jack Daily, Manor, lost out on the first hole when she picked up in the ditch, while Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Chevy Chase, picked up on the second after encountering trap trouble, and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, Congressional, also lost out on the second when she was in the ditch twice, bouncing out the first time but staying there the second. Mrs. Giles won with a pair of fives.

Ninety for Mrs. Peabody

Mrs. Hume Peabody topped the qualifiers in the 90 class, with that figure, while Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Manor, and Louise Claytor, Chevy Chase, had 91. Mrs. H. J. Simmons, Manor, had 92, as did another favored contender, Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional. Host club champion, Mrs. H. M. Brundage, had 93, and Mrs. George Goetzmann, Congressional, and Mrs. Ora Emge, Indian Spring, made the grade with 94 each.

Miss Brown played the outgoing nine in 38, dropping a 10-foot putt for a birdie on the second hole and otherwise playing good, steady golf. She hit trouble on the eleventh and twelfth on the incoming trip, two traps on the first and one on the latter, and was against a tree on the fifteenth for her third six of the nine.

Maryland State Amateur Entries to Close Tomorrow

Juniors Also Warned of Deadlines for City, State Affairs; Women's Duffers List Closes

District golfers, members of clubs affiliated with the Maryland State Golf Association, have until tomorrow noon to enter the nineteenth annual State championship that starts Friday with a qualifying round, at Rolling Road.

Entries close at noon tomorrow with Emmet Gary, association secretary, at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore. The fee is $3, but post entries will be assessed an additional $2.

Match play rounds in all flights are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday over the Catonsville course. At least 25 local linksmen are expected to battle for the crown vacated by Otto Greiner, who will compete in the National Intercollegiate Championships.

Junior golfers, under 21, are reminded that entries for the Maryland Junior championship close Saturday at 5 p. m., with Gary, for the State tourney next Tuesday at Woodmont. Entries for the District Junior championship, Wednesday through Friday, June 28-30, also close on Friday, with Dr. W. C. Barr, care of the Army and Navy Club, site of the tournament.

Entries close Friday, June 23 for the Duffers Tournament, next scheduled event of the District Women's Golf Association, June 27 at Manor. Only players with 16 handicaps and over are eligible for the trophy.

Grebb died as a result of his injury and Herman and Langford are now totally blind, it was noted. Miller last night added to this roster the names of former Middleweight Champion Tiger Flowers and Fort Worth, Tex., bantamweight, Dick Griffin.

"Flowers died on the operating table while seeking a cure for his ailing eye," he said. "Griffin is now totally blind and walking with a cane and dog to guide him."

N. B. A. officials who unanimously voted that Lewis' title be declared vacant included Reynolds, Miller, Edward C. Foster, Rhode Island; Joseph Triner, Illinois; James A. Blake, Virginia; Eddie Bohn, Colorado; Sam Murbarger, Indiana; John J. Ahern, Minnesota; Fred J. Saddy, Wisconsin; Joseph F. Maloney, New Jersey.

The physicians who examined Lewis at Pittsburgh, in addition to Dr. McClenahan, were Drs. M. R. Goldman and Albert J. Guerinot.

"In accepting the findings of three physicians as a partial basis for vacating Lewis' title, N. B. A. officials fully agree that Lewis has been a worthy champion and that the eye condition has been incurred by an otherwise excellently conditioned athlete who has been a credit to boxing," their announcement stated.

Cubs, Dodgers Tie, 3-3; Rain Comes in 8th

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—The National League bowed to the weatherman completely today, with two of its scheduled three games cancelled entirely by rain and the third —the Dodgers-Cubs battle—halted at the end of eight frames with the score tied at 3-all.

The Dodgers, victimized four times out of six tries in their current road tour, seemed headed for victory when the rain poured into Wrigley Field and sent both teams scurrying for cover.

Yanks Defeat Tigers Despite 3 Home Runs

Oral Hildebrand Gives Six Hits as Champs Win 'Rubber' Game, 8-5

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 19.—Oral Hildebrand limited the Detroit Tigers to six hits—three of them home runs—as the world champions took the series from the invaders by an 8-to-5 "rubber-game" victory today.

The Yankees teed off early in the game, making 5 of their runs in the first inning off Paul Trout, then picking up 1 each in the fifth, seventh and eighth—the last 2 coming on homers by Bill Dickey and Red Rolfe—Bill's sixth and Red's fifth of the year.

The Tigers outhomered the champs with Barney McCosky, Pinky Higgins and Red Kress, who was batting for Archie McKain, all connecting. McCosky's homer came in the sixth and was the first hit the Tigers had off Hildebrand.

Allie Ritzenberg Wins First Match in College Net Play

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, June 19.—Qualifying matches to select four singles players and two doubles teams to represent the third district in the intercollegiate tennis championships, beginning June 26 at the Merion Cricket Club, opened here today. Navy and Virginia have entered the largest squads.

Today's winners were Allie Ritzenberg, University of Maryland; Charley Channing and George Dunklin, University of Virginia, and Bob Kerdosha, Presbyterian College.

In defeating Bill Davis, one of Navy's leading players, 6—4, 6—4, Kerdosha exhibited the best form of the afternoon. A fast and stocky southpaw, Kerdosha excelled in placing shots and had his Middy opponent chasing all over the court.

Ritzenberg, co-Southern Conference doubles champion with Nathan Askin, came from behind a 4—5, 40—15 deficit to defeat Landon Buchanan, Virginia, in the first set, and then experienced little difficulty. He took the second set, 6—0.

Dunklin displayed fine passing shots in turning back Jim McPherson, Navy, 6—2, 6—4, while Channing easily beat Pete Bacheler, also from Navy, 6—2, 6—1.

Louis Rests, Sees Yankees Beat Tigers

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 19.—Joe Louis watched another champion—the New York Yankees—today as he left his training camp for the first time since he opened work for his championship bout with Tony Galento three weeks ago.

After a strenuous week-end, in which he belted spar mates right and left, the champion took the entire day off. However, it was his favorite team, the Detroit Tigers, and not the Yankees, that brought Joe to town.

Louis, nearing peak condition, has only five more public workouts scheduled before he steps into the ring to defend his crown on June 28.

Jacobs to Request Donovan as Referee

Summit, N. J., June 19 (AP).—Joe Jacobs, manager of Two-ton Tony Galento, the challenger for Joe Louis' heavyweight crown, is going to ask the New York State athletic commission to name Arthur Donovan referee for the title fight June 28.

Jacobs announced as much today, though he said he would have to wait until the day of the fight to make his formal request, when the commission holds a meeting, at the weighing-in ceremonies.

Rain Postpones Fight UntilTonight

of Jack Sharkey, said last night the former champion is in his best shape of the year. Lou, a southpaw, is getting up in years for a fighter but is on the comeback trail seeking to regain the middleweight crown.

Abrams, who will be fighting before the home folks for the first time since last summer, was equally confident. He will be about a 6-5 favorite over the former champion tonight because of his youth and recent impressive showings in New York's Madison Square Garden. Georgie is now unofficially rated between No. 9 and No. 6 on the National Boxing Association's middleweight title contenders' ladder.

The preliminary card will feature two hard-hitting youngsters in Young Jack Dempsey, Brouillard's stablemate, and Frankie Bruno, Abrams' sparring partner, who will meet in a six-round semifinal.

Mid-Atlantic Softball Play Starts Tonight

Maritime Commission Faces Baltimore Team at Arlington

The Midatlantic softball tournament will get under way at the Ballston Park, Arlington, Va., at 8 o'clock tonight when the strong Overnight Transportation ten, of Baltimore, last year's Maryland State champion, meets Maritime Commission.

Harold Steffes is expected to be Maritime's starting pitcher and probably will be opposed by "Fireball" Brown who shut out the world's champion Briggs team at Daytona Beach last summer. Brown is said to be the finest pitcher in the East.

Preceding this game will be a preliminary between the Navy Department and the colored Arlington Democrats.

The tournament continues Friday night with a game between Tru-Blu, of Washington, and Tru-Fit, of Baltimore. The winner of this game will meet the winner of tonight's game for the championship next Tuesday night.

RoughNanjoSingh, 'Cobra Death Man,' Added to Mat Card

Nanjo Singh, the Hindu "cobra death lock man," disqualified for roughness in six of his eight matches here, will get another chance Thursday at Griffith Stadium against Tiger Joe Marsh.

Nanjo will tackle the Tiger in a special match and will be "on trial." Promoter Joe Turner said yesterday. Turner said he has warned Nanjo if he brings out any more of his underhand tactics he will be barred from the local ring.

Jules Strongbow and Chief Chewaki, both claiming to be Indians, will stage a return bout on the card which features Laverne Baxter and Jack Hader. Strongbow and the Chief almost stole last week's show when they continued their fight in the ringside, Jules getting a cracked, lacerated skull from a chair wielded by Chewaki.

I. D. R. A. Tennis Team Beats Farm Credit, 4-1

Armenidas 2d, Ivonia Takes Third

Winner Overtakes Early Pace-Setter, Scores Easily, Palumbo Aboard

By Walter Haight.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 19. Miss Epe, twice a figure in a dead heat at this meeting, definitely won a purse today when she outclassed her opposition in the Martinsburg, a test of 6½ furlongs over a muddy track. With Jockey Sammy Palumbo, riding champion hereabouts, in the saddle, the Sea Rock mare gave the cameraman a chance to rest when she galloped to the wire eight lengths ahead of her nearest rival. Armenidas, a trailer most of the way, was a game-running second with R. P. Gillette's Ivonia, installed the favorite, in third position.

Miss Epe, owned by Mrs. G. Hutchins, paid a $9.20 mutuel, while going the 6½ furlongs over the soggy track in a creditable 1:23.

Ivonia was first to show in front and appeared ready to set the pace all the way. However, Palumbo had Miss Epe close up. As the field neared the far turn, Palumbo asked Miss Epe for speed and when she responded the result was written on the wall. The mare rushed to the front and from that point to the wire it was a question as to how far she would win.

Armenidas, badly outrun in the early stages, closed with a rush. Ivonia, tiring from the time she was unable to combat with Miss Epe, finished in third position.

Rain and more rain fell during the afternoon. Scratches were numerous and mud baths for the jockeys came with virtually every race.

Those who hooked up with Counter March, a $7.60 shot in the second race, with Sun Belle, a $6.80 proposition, in the third race, collected a $28.80 daily double.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL DOT, $8.80, $4.80, $5.20; LONG PASS, $4.80, $3.80; EXPELLED, $5.00.

ROYAL DOT, first away, took command at once, disposed of the challenge of LONG PASS and won in galloping fashion. EXPELLED, within striking distance from the start, saved ground and showed a good effort. POMPEY'S ROSE, off slowly, closed with a bold rush on the outside. KIN MAG was off slowly. CANWYN had speed to the stretch and weakened. WAGOLD could not keep up.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:07. Winner, J. T. Harris' br. g. (8), by Dress Parade—Celmint. Trained by J. T. Harris. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNTERMARCH, $7.60, $5.40, $3.60; BURSTING, $20.60, $7.80; ELEGANT DAME, $5.20.

COUNTERMARCH forged to the front at once, shook off ELEGANT DAME and held away thereafter under good handling. BURSTING, close up from the start, closed gamely. ELEGANT DAME held on stubbornly in the closing stages. GINGER HACKLE, taken back soon after the start, came with a rush on the inside at the end. PLAIN ACE raced wide and weakened. SUN TEMPEST could not keep up. ESTHER O. ran out badly.

THIRD RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:34½. Off at 3:38½. Winner, R. P. Gillette's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN BELLE, $6.80, $4.00, $3.00; NERVY NELLA, $12.00, $6.80; NIGHT WATCH, $2.80.

SUN BELLE beat the gate, opened a good lead, came again after being headed by NERVY NELLA and won under punishment. NERVY NELLA, close up from the start, went through on the inside to get to the front and barely failed to last. NIGHT WATCH weakened gradually. JIMMY S. was held safe. SUN TENSE had early speed.

Daily Double, Countermarch and Sun Belle, Paid $28.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:07. Winner, S. H. Rogers' br. m. (5), by Caid—Grand Peggy. Trained by D. Chamblin. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:24 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEGADETTE, $5.20, $3.20, $2.80; BROKEN RHYTHM, $7.00, $4.40; ASTER PRINCESS, $2.80.

PEGADETTE, first away, ran HAPPY MIRACLE into submission, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. BROKEN RHYTHM worked her way to contention and closed willingly. ASTER PRINCESS was hard ridden and had no excuses. HAPPY MIRACLE went to the front at the first turn, but could not stay. The others were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:37½. Winner, Mrs. H. Simms' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH BUDDY, $5.80, $3.60, $2.80; GOLDEN MAYNE, $5.40, $3.80; TIMEPIECE, $3.60.

ROUGH BUDDY took command going to the first turn, opened a gap under strong handling and barely lasted. GOLDEN MAYNE, forwardly placed from the beginning, went to the leader on the backstretch, came again to move up menacingly in the stretch, swerved out suddenly and finished full of run. Vesseli appeared to be blinded by the mud. TIMEPIECE was hard ridden and had no excuses. MISS SELMA was off poorly and could not reach serious contention. WHITTLE PETE stumbled in the opening furlong and was taken back.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:04½. Off at 5:06½. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' ch. m. (5), by Sea Rock—London Charm. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS EPE, $9.20, $4.80, $2.80; ARMENIDAS, $13.00, $5.80; IVONIA, $3.00.

MISS EPE, closest to the early pace of IVONIA, took command when asked and drew far out to win as her rider pleased. ARMENIDAS, trailer for 3 furlongs, closed with a bold rush, but was no match for the winner. IVONIA got to the top early, but weakened gradually after being caught. RAVENHURST moved up menacingly and tired. The others were not prominent.

RAINING AND MUDDY.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:31½. Winner, R. C. Waple's b. g. (5), by Jamestown—Galloping Girl. Trained by M. H. Everhart. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:32 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA JIMMIE, $5.80, $2.20, $2.60; BROOKE HEROD, $2.40, $2.40; STENOGRAPHER, $8.60.

JUSTA JIMMIE shook off BROOKE HEROD to get to the front and held away thereafter under good handling. BROOKE HEROD was steadied along when unable to get to the front, responded when placed to a drive, but was not good enough. STENOGRAPHER was held safe while showing good effort. MISLED was used up forcing the pace.

EIGHTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:53½. Off at 5:59. Winner, E. G. Davis' b. g. (5), by Trojan—Starlight. Trained by T. Lewis. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:31.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TROSTAR, $5.60, $3.20, $3.00; CAUTIOUS BO, $3.00, $2.60; PUKKA HEAVEN, $3.20.

TROSTAR, hard ridden to get to the front, opened up a long lead and was never threatened. CAUTIOUS BO, hard ridden, went gamely, but was no match for the winner. PUKKA HEAVEN had no excuses. LADY CIREK did not appear to favor the going. LOOKOUT HILL had early speed and weakened. WHICH BLOND closed gamely.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., JJune 19—Dear Al.:

One of the Benningites wants to know about the references to "Stars" in regard to entries here. Well, each time that a horse is on the "also eligible" list and does not get into action, he is given a "Star." In drawing up the entries, horses with the most "Stars" are given preference. If a horse gets into a race and is scratched, he loses his "Stars." Another Benningite wants to know about a horse "running out badly." That means simply what it implies. The horse gets to a turn and fails to make it, running toward the outside fence. That's what Dark Ace did here before shifting over to Delaware Park and cracking at better than 20-1. From the looks of some of the juvenile races here, it seems that nobody tries to beat Miss Maker when she runs. Her beaten opponents come back with startling form reversals. Steward J. J. Grady, who left for Wheeling to serve as the West Virginia Racing Commission's representative, returned here today. He will serve in the Steward's pagoda until the meeting ends July 8. There have been six claims at the meeting with the sum of $4,600 figuring in the transactions. Dick Pending, track superintendent at Bowie and Marlboro stated today that he was erecting several new barns and exhibition buildings for the 10-day's racing, beginning August 23 at Marlboro. Fourteen horses are eligible for the Washington Golf and Country Club Handicap to be run Wednesday over the mile and one eighth route. The eligibles are: Its A Maid, who holds two track records, Jinneal, Big Bud, Spotless, Happy Road, Dixie Flapper, Flashing Steel, Huppy, Count Me, Beacon Queen, Grouchers Boy, War Rumor, Justa Pilgrim and Best Policy. Sunday's severe rain soaked the infield diamond, thus causing the postponement tomorrow's schedule match between the undefeated Scribes soft ball team, and the Jockeys.

BILL.

First race—Doctor's Nurse ran a good race here and seems capable of graduating from the maiden ranks in this field, providing she can overcome the inside post position. Nob's Brother, has shown speed on occasions and is dangerous. Din should take down part of the money.

Second race—Kissin Kid belongs in this short sprint. Has the speed to get away on top and I believe she will stay there. Lucie Mowlee has set the pace in longer races and should be a keen factor. Flying Heart would be close if in action.

Third race—Presumption was shipped here for some winning efforts. Carries 116 pounds and Palumbo to do the riding. Miss Dolly Kay is in excellent form. Dilwin may be able to better that last.

Fourth race—Counora appears nicely placed in this field and promises to make amends for that rather dull performance last week. Lyde is better than generally rated and belongs with these. Suneen is dropping down.

Fifth race—Morvim has the early speed and will like the off track. Needs only to get off the reserve list in my opinion. Trixie Lass, loves the route and will be primed for a serious effort. Flagabout is at tops and is bound to be a threat.

Sixth race—Margie Wrack, won her last in good fashion and the bad going should move her up. Cats Cradle and Nob will be at home on the track and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Seventh race—Call Me Anne had all kinds of speed to the stretch last out and needs only to improve slightly to take down the main money. Lew Dunlin should be a factor. Boulder Dam belongs with this company.

Eighth race—Machilla, with Palumbo to do the riding, may be the right one in this rather open affair. I'm going to string along. Hagerstown Boy improved last out. Venetian will like the track.

Substitute race—If this race is used I'll take Waugh Scout, Radial, and Dolled Up.

Best bet—Margie Wrack.

Second race—Shenuit, Pompe Grande, Lonely Road.
Third race—Valpuiseaux, Sapelo, Little Cottage II.
Fourth race—On Stage, Close To, Spout Run.
Fifth race—Royal Cross, Dark Friend, Graeme Cracker.
Sixth race—Unheralded, Trina, Abmeres.
Seventh race—Countess Lena, Bounding Count, Lady Jaqueline.
Eighth race—Chauvin, James Pal, Offender.

Cowboy Scott-Angott Fight Is Postponed

Louisville, Ky., June 19 (AP).—A downpour tonight caused postponement until Wednesday night of the 10-round boxing match between Sammy Angott, Louisville, a leading lightweight title contender, and "Cowboy" Howard Scott, of Washington.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

northern season is in the bag. Taken by Dodd Shuster, the Wilmington sportsman, to win for the second year in succession the trophy offered by the Ocean City Game Fishermans Association for the first fish caught off that port.

ACKERMAN

Weighing 85 pounds and measuring 7 feet 10 inches, it put up a battle that taxed to the utmost the strength of this veteran marlin fisherman. In the hour and 55 minutes it took to boat it, the great fish jumped 52 times, counting those times as jumps when half or more of its body was clear, and eight times the wire leader was in the hands of Capt. George Taylor, who was unable to handle the still green fish.

As far as we know, it is possible that this might be some kind of a record as to the number of jumps, for if we are not mistaken, the two anglers who have caught more white marlin than any others we know of, Paul Townsend and Kip Farrington, place the greatest number of jumps of a boated fish at 48 and 47. Marlin that have broken loose with a lot of line have been known to jump all day long. It is this characteristic that has earned for the white marlin the reputation of being the gamest and most spectacular of any fish in all the seven seas.

Shuster's marlin was caught a full week ahead of the first fish last year or the year before. However, not unexpected, for these fish run before the wind, and that had been from southeast to southwest for almost a week. In addition the knowledge that big amberjack and dolphin had run up the coast as far as Diamond Shoals and were striking in midsummer form; and both are species that usually follow the marlin.

The fact that the first fish has been caught, and that there is every right to believe plenty more are feeding on the Jack Spot and other shoals in the vicinity, even though none have been seen, isn't reason enough for anyone to get excited. Or to think that they can go down this coming week-end and get the marlin they missed last year. It isn't as simple as that. Better wait until the water warms a little more and the good going hits its full stride, which should be about July 1. But if you are one of those anglers who wouldn't count a blank early season day as wasted, then go now, because there is always a chance, and it is very likely that even the blue fishermen will be fishing the offshore waters now, with the hope that is always eternal in the fisherman's breast.

The same southwest wind that was the making of one kind of fishing, was the reason for the muddy water which very successfully brought to a full stop the surf fishing from Ocean City to Cape Charles, and which had just reached its stride the week before.

No self-respecting channel bass would feed in it. For that matter, neither would the trout or kings, or even the hardheads. Skates were the only fish that seemed not to mind the discolored water which extended far beyond the sloughs and the ability of any angler to heave a sinker, and the great numbers of them beached by some fifteen or eighteen anglers, in as many miles of beach, drew the wild hogs until they were almost as thick as the flies.

Fox Hill Levels, named from the topography of the beach that runs so flat and level for nearly fifteen miles below the North Beach Coast Guard Station, is in prime shape for the surfman, or will be within another day or two, now that the wind has shifted. Mile after mile of the most beautiful beach, with an almost continuous slough so close under the beach that even the variest tyro can get his bait beyond the curling breakers to where the big fellows feed.

The one drawback, the length of time required to get there and the lack of comfortable accomodations. The latter, hardly to be noticed on days when the big fellows are taking the hook, but looming to great proportions on those blank ones, when the real fun of the day is only found around the festive board after the day is done.

Pari-Mutuel Bill Receives Test in New Jersey Today

Trenton, June 19.—A widespread drive to divert the metropolitan area's golden stream of horse-racing profits from bookmakers to State treasuries receives its first test tomorrow when citizens of New Jersey vote on a pari-mutuel bill to be offered in similar form to the New York electorate in November.

Spirited campaigns have been carried on by both camps for several months but observers believe the measure will be approved by an 8-to-5 margin with only a light vote being cast.

Banker Holds Trade Outlook Here Favorable

But Living Costs and Taxes Are Relatively High, Says Willard

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Business conditions in the District of Columbia continue favorable and the local trend for the near future appears bright, states William H. Willard, a vice president of National Savings & Trust Co., and chairman of the commercial trade activities committee, District of Columbia Bankers Association, in his annual report for the latter group.

With respect to business conditions in the District during the past 12-month perod, Mr. Willard advises they have been relatively favorable, this being confirmed by several indices.

Washington Gas Light Co., Potomac Electric Power Co. and Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. have continued to attract more and more customers and, through promotional rates, have encouraged a wider use of their respective facilities, he explains, adding that at the close of 1938 Washington Gas Light Co. had in use about 187,000 meters, Potomac Electric Power Co. served approximately 190,000 customers, while Chesapeake & Ohio Telephone Co. reported about 240,000 telephones in service. In each instance these figures represent gains over the preceding year.

Street Car Traffic

Although during the first part of 1938 there was a slight reduction in the number of passengers carried by Capital Transit Co., nevertheless, toward the end of 1938 this trend was reversed and a gain in the number of fares became evident, he reports, stating that adopting a policy of "public be pleased," the management replaced a very substantial amount of its obsolete equipment with modern streamlined cars and buses, which are regaining much patronage for it.

Although the average family income in the District of Columbia ranks well above the national average Mr. Willard states, nevertheless, the cost of living is relatively high, this, to a large degree, being attributable to the fact that Washington is a show city and the cost of maintenance is far above that of other cities of comparable size.

Local Taxes

"Since the Federal monetary contribution to the District of Columbia appears to be growing progressively less, he cites, the main revenue for local governmental expense must be borne by its residents, who, at the present time, pay in the form of a real estate tax, which while perhaps only moderate in rate, nevertheless, in aggregate is exceedingly high,

13 Local Bankers Begin Courses at Graduate School

The following 13 Washington junior bankers arrived at New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday for 2 weeks' intensive study at the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University:

Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co.; John E. Monk, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Samuel R. Carpenter, John F. English, Laurence H. Jones and Frederic Solomon with the Federal Reserve Board; Kenneth O. Hulse, Hamilton National; Daniel J. Callahan, jr.; John M. Christie, Henry K. Dierkoph and Charles R. Fadeley, Riggs National; Willard G. McGraw, Union Trust Co., and Vincent A. Sheehy, jr., Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Richard W. Hill, registrar, said yesterday that the resident session would be attended by 649 bank officers representing banks in 39 States. There will be 227 in the entering class, 250 second-year students and 172 in the class which will graduate on June 30.

In addition to classroom work the students will listen to evening lectures by Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co.; Dr. Everett Dean Martin, of Claremont College, Claremont, Calif., and Dr. Paul F. Cadman, president of the American Research Foundation, San Francisco.

Stocks Move Up Despite Foreign News Short Covering a Factor in Advance Bonds Are Firm in Light Transactions

New York, June 19.—Although the Far Eastern and European news has not calculated to stimulate the buying of shares, security prices moved irregularly higher today with adjustment of short positions adjudged to be an influence. Bonds were steady to higher and foreign exchange quotations held at about the same level as on Friday and Saturday. Wheat was weak, declines of ⅝ to 1¼ cents a bushel at Chicago depressing the general level of prices to around 9 cents from the season's tops. Quite definitely, the latest outbreaks of war jitters are not helping wheat. Cotton advanced 1 to 4 points in a slow but steady market.

Prime Issues in Demand

Many of the pivotals came to the front again in big board trading despite the slow pace of trading, only 344,820 shares changing hands. Motor, store, utility and blue chip manufacturing issues made the best showings while oils, rails and coppers were hesitant. In the petroleum division the principal influence was an indication that there may be difficulty in establishing gasoline prices at a level profitable to the refiners and marketers. A leading independent which posted a half-cent advance last week, dropped back to the former quotation as some of its competitors failed to follow. Oils, however, were in the background and automotives, power shares, rubbers and merchandising descriptions were the most active with United States Rubber again at the top of the list. It recorded a half-point advance on turnover of 10,700 shares.

Electric Auto-Lite was a strong feature, closing at 31⅝, up 1½ points, while Chrysler and General Motors gained ⅞ and ½ respectively. Reports of new-car sales in June continue good.

The gain in steel production was reflected only moderately in steel-share prices although the rise was a bit better than the Street had expected. Current operations have a certain similarity to those in June, 1934, when production was stimulated by orders placed in expectation of a price rise after midyear. Currently, a large part of rollings are for the flat—rolled products contracted for at cut prices in May. According to observers, prices cannot be said to be stabilized in steel until quotations are fully tested by new buying in volume. Aside from orders based on Government work, this can scarcely occur before late July or August and possibly not until September. Steel common added half a point and Bethlehem was up ¼. Some others in the group were unchanged to fractionally lower.

A. T. & T. Strong

Strength in Telephone and in some other investment shares was attributed to short covering. The short interest in A. T. & T. was reported to have been increased last week when indications were given by Washington of additional regulations and restrictions on the communications. Telephone closed 2¾ higher. Westinghouse, Union Carbide and duPont were others to advance sharply. Spalding preferred rose to 72½, up 7 points and a new high on buying apparently based on the recently announced recapitalization plan. Aviation Corporation shares dipped ¼ as the company announced an offering of rights on a one-for-three basis, involving issuance of 925,917 new shares.

Foreign news was depressing, including the European report that Germany is determined to "liquidate" the Danzig situation before mid-July, and the intensification of the Japanese blockade against the British-French concessions at Tientsin.

On the domestic front there was a rumor that the cotton textile industry is contemplating a 25 per cent cut in output.

Bond Market Firm

Listed bonds were steady to firm in another quiet session today. United States Treasury issues were mostly higher by smallest fractions of a point, but the buying was spasmodic and unconvincing. Guaranteed issues of the Treasury drifted downward. In the speculative sections small gains were the rule, but a few larger advances were noted. Foreign dollar securities remained idle and irregular. Turnover in all groups was $4,170,000, or less than half a normal day's business.

Long and intermediate term United States Government securities tended higher by 1-32 to 3-32 point, owing principally to the announced decision to redeem on July 1 a maturity of $41,500,000 Federal Home Loan Bank debentures, without a refunding offering. This indication that another large block of funds will become available to the investment market stimulated modest replacement buying in the Treasury list. But guaranteed issues of the Treasury were soft, for it is realized that Treasury funds will be built up hereafter through agency flotations.

Fair Weather Knocks Wheat To New Lows

Closings Average 9 Cents Below The Season's Top

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 19.—Wheat prices fell to new lows today in the current declining market, due largely to favorable weather conditions which have prevailed throughout the grain belt the last few weeks.

Losses which amounted to as much as 1⅜ cents at times carried values down to a level about 9 cents below the season's highs reached May 31 and to the lowest point in seven weeks. Much of the upturn scored late in April and during May, due to drought damage in the Southwest, has been wiped away.

Hedging sales based on expanding marketings in the Southwest and in the Northwest as well, liquidation of July contracts and selling inspired by weakness of foreign prices and continued good weather wheat belt caused the downturn. over the North American spring

When the lows of 70⅛ for July and 70⅞ for September had been reached the market developed rallying power due partly to short covering but prices closed ⅝-1¼ lower than Saturday, July, 70¼-70⅜; September, 71¼-71⅜.

Corn and oats held fairly steady through most of the session but weakened with wheat, corn closing ⅛-½ down; July, 49¾; September, 51⅛-51¼. Oats lost ⅛ and rye, 1¾-1⅞, while lard gained 2 cents.

Cotton Advances 5-20 Cents a Bale In Closing Rally

New York, June 19 (AP).—Cotton futures recouped morning losses late today, leaving closing quotations 1 to 4 points ahead.

Bombay selling was held responsible for early weakness. Bombay-New York price differences were the widest of the season after a five-day decline in the Far Eastern market and Bombay brokers sold in New York and Liverpool against purchases at Bombay.

The weather—unfavorable rains in the central cotton belt and forecasts for continued precipitations for the next day or two—was again the main market prop.

Aviation Corp. Files New Stock Issue

New York, June 19 (AP).—Stockholders of Aviation Corporation were offered today the right to subscribe to one additional share of capital stock at $3.30 for each 3 shares held as of June 22. The rights expire July 6. Any unsubscribed shares will be underwritten by a banking group headed by Emanuel & Co. and Schroder Rockefeller & Co.

A registration statement filed with the SEC May 29 for 925,917 new shares indicated proceeds from the issue will be used to repay a $500,000 loan from Aviation & Transportation Corporation, parent concern, and for creation of additional manufacturing facilites.

Atlantic Coast Is Retiring Its 4% Debentures

New York, June 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. announced today that it would pay its convertible 6-30 year 4 per cent debenture bonds at maturity on November 1, when interest on the bonds will cease. Anticipating the maturity of these bonds, the company is notifying holders that on and after tomorrow they may obtain immediate payment for their bonds at their principal amount and accrued interest to the date of presentation, at the office of the Safe Deposit and Trust Co. of Baltimore.

A total of $4,444,830 bonds of the issue, all registered, are at present outstanding out of an original issue of $23,072,300. The $18,627,470 of this issue of bonds which have been retired and canceled were exchanged for common stock. Under the terms of this privilege, each $135 principal amount of debentures were exchangeable for $100 of Atlantic Coast Line common stock. Payment of the bonds will be met out of Treasury funds.

So. Pacific May Net Nearly 5 Times Year Ago

New York, June 19 (AP).—Southern Pacific Co. today reported May net operating income of $1,956,587, nearly five times more than May last year. The railroad, among the first of major carriers reporting for May, placed the comparable 1938 figure at $418,317, which is before fixed charges and other income.

Net operating income in May for Kansas City Southern Railway was $214,745, compared with $265,064 in May a year ago.

U. S. Ready for Boom, Floyd Carlisle Says

New York, June 19 (AP).—"It would take only an infinitesimal change in the attitude of the Government to start business recovery on a grand scale," said Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the Consolidated Edison Co., today at a meeting of the Public Utilities Advertising Association.

"This country," said the speaker, "is ready to increase its production on a basis that will make other times of recovery look pale by comparison."

Business Failures Drop To Lowest This Year

New York, June 19 (AP).—Business failures in the United States dropped to the lowest level of any full week thus far in the year during the period ended June 15, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The latest total of 212 compared with 234 in the preceding week and 257 in the comparable week last year. The year's low of 210 was touched in the June 2 week, which was shortened by the Memorial Day holiday.

Business Loans Dip $2,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agriculture loans of banks, for the country as a whole, declined slightly for the week ended June 1.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported their business loan total of $3,831,000,000 was $2,000,000 less than in the preceding week. New York City banks had reported a $5,000,000 increase in this loan classification during the week, while banks elsewhere had small decreases,

'Big Board' to Test Public Opinion on Effect of Reform

New York, June 19 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange, operating for the last 15 months under a "reform" administration, wants to know how it stands with the public.

With the view of getting this appraisal, the exchange, it was learned today, is negotiating with an agency which specializes in the convassing of public opinion.

The exchange is understood to be anxious to learn, among other things, just how much the public is aware of the internal "house-cleaning" that was effected early last year, which culminated in the election as paid president of 31-year-old William McChesney Martin, jr., how the institution rates in the public mind now, as compared with prereform days, and what the public thinks remains to be done.

Exchange salesmen said a contract for the proposed survey had not yet been signed.

Steel Operations Advance to 55%

New York, June 19 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 1.9 points to 55 per cent of capacity, compared with 53.1 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 48.5 per cent of capacity while a year ago they were 28 per cent.

SUEZ CANAL COMPANY

PRINCIPLES ACTUATING BOARD'S POLICY

MARQUIS DE VOGUE'S SPEECH

The ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Suez Canal Company was held on Monday, June 5th, in Paris.

M. LE MARQUIS DE VOGUE, chairman of the board of directors, presided.

The CHAIRMAN said: Encouraged by the results obtained, and fortified by your confidence, we shall pursue our policy, without being affected by contradictions or criticisms to which, in the confusion of present times, it may give rise. These are singularly troubled times indeed, when the essential principles of moral law are flouted, when the pledged word is no longer considered as sacred, when integrity is considered a "luxury reserved for the rich" when from an official platform the words, "force is the foundation of relations between peoples," can be hurled to an exulting crowd. It is a new law which is being evolved, founded on violence and envy, and where the Rome of the glorious days, the Rome of "jus gentium," would have difficulty in recognizing her generous and civilizing inspiration.

By reviving ways of which this great ancestor had condemned the barbarism, the would-be innovators have shown a desire to try their hand on your company.

ITALIAN CLAIMS

It is in Italy that the movement started, by a veritable crusade in which all the papers of the peninsula enrolled, great and small, those of the capital and those of the provinces, with a unanimity the source of which is not difficult to guess. Relying on inaccuracies as regards facts, on errors of dates or figures which denote an extreme bad faith if they are deliberate and an extreme ignorance if they are not, its promoters and their allies have striven to contest our rights, to belittle our management, to cast doubt upon our integrity.

Our modern crusaders have even summoned history to their aid. According to them, Ferdinand de Lesseps was no more than an impostor skilled in the art of parading in borrowed plumes. The Canal, they say, is the work of three Italians: Negrelli, who drew up the plans; Paleocapa, who supervised the work, and Torelli, who carried out the propaganda and brought in the subscriptions.

Now, Negrelli, a talented Austrian civil engineer and a member of the "Societe d'Etudes" founded by Enfantin, in which he was at the head of a German group, died in 1858, year before work was even started on the execution of a plan which was not his own and of which a Frenchman, Linant de Bellefond, was the inspirer. Paleocapa, in a letter dated the same year, 1858, asks to be excused by de Lesseps for not being able to collaborate on account of his having been stricken with blindness. Moreover, it is well known that the execution of the work was entrusted almost entirely, to French civil engineers under the direction of Mougel and later of Voisin. As to Torelli, on the eve of the opening of the Canal, when all work was practically finished, he wrote to a friend in the following terms:—"In Italy people are beginning to take the great enterprise seriously—it is somewhat late, but better late than never." Indeed, only 2,719 shares had been taken up in Italy, scarcely more than ½ per cent. of the capital—whereas de Lesseps's appeal had been answered in France by the purchase of 207,888 shares—i. e., 52 per cent. of the capital.

The professed object of all this clamour, where political purposes can be seen behind the claims of imaginary rights, is to secure seats on the board for Italy and an extensive reduction in transit dues, pending the dispossession of your company and its replacement by an International Commission. In answer to pretensions actuated by such a spirit and formulated in such a manner, we shall only state once again the principles which guide your board in carrying out the mandate which you have entrusted to them.

In the first place, it is an unalterable and absolute rule for the board not to operate the Canal, as it is accused of doing, by stinting on what it should do and for the sole benefit of the shareholders. Conscious of the responsibility assumed towards Egypt, from whom it holds its rights, and towards universal trade, in the interest of which these rights are exercised, the first and foremost care of your company is to endow the Canal, in advance wherever possible, with all the improvements called for by the growing requirements of navigation.

Furthermore, your board have always applied themselves to making reductions of dues and increases of dividends go together, showing thus their firm will not to dissociate the interests of shipowners from those of shareholders.

The company, at the instigation of the board, has gone even further, and, anticipating an idea which is sometimes considered an achievement of modern outlook, has for over fifty years admitted to the management of the undertaking representatives of users of the Canal. By virtue of an agreement signed by Ferdinand de Lesseps in 1883, seven seats on the board were reserved for representatives of the British mercantile marine. Other shipowners, chosen in France, Holland or Germany, joined the board later on. Circumstances may lead the company not to stop at that, but the company is sole judge of the opportuneness of a decision. It is, in any case, indispensable that representatives of users, when joining the board, should do so with the desire to collaborate loyally in the proper running of the concern, and not with the intention of thwarting it, for it would be ridiculous to open the door of a house to someone wishing to gain admittance merely to ransack it.

EGYPTIAN, BRITISH, AND FRENCH INTERESTS

In maintaining these points of view, which are, you will agree, founded on reason itself, we are certain of being in complete agreement with the Governments whose opinions weigh with us, and in the first place, with the Egyptian Government. The Suez Canal is in Egyptian territory; this sometimes appears to be forgotten. If Egypt thought fit to entrust the construction and management of the Canal to a private company, and if she has organized its protection within the limits of treaties and conventions signed by her, that brooks no interference. It is Egypt's rights which we defend when we defend our own, and the Egyptian Government, in safeguarding the free exercise of our rights within the terms of the concession granted us, and which we administer under its control, is serving at the same time the interests of Egypt, both present and future.

Besides, it must always be borne in mind that Great Britain is the largest shareholder in the company, and that the majority of the capital stock belongs to the French. Hence the obligation for the British and French Governments to defend, the one, their own interests, and the other, the interests of their nationals. They are each devoting themselves thereto with a firmness to which we are pleased to pay tribute.

Everything incites us, therefore, to continue on our road without any change in our course of action, deaf to unjust criticisms and empty threats.

The meeting unanimously approved all the resolutions presented by the board.

ANNUAL REPORT

The following are extracts from the directors' report:—

In 1938 shipping through the Canal was slightly less than during 1937. To the reduction in sterling receipts resulting from this fall in traffic was added the effect of two reductions in dues: one made on April 1, 1937, the influence of which was felt during the first quarter of 1938; the other which was only in force during the last two weeks of the year. As to expenditure, it would have remained approximately the same had it not been for a monetary factor the rise in the price of gold which brought about increases in charges for debentures, for interest on and amortisation of shares, and for the service of certain debts at present on the gold basis.

The reduction in receipts and the increase in expenditure have brought about an appreciable reduction in the net results of the year, which, expressed in Egyptian pounds, are 18.6 per cent. less than 1937. On the other hand, the depreciation of the French franc has once again swollen, although to a lesser extent than last year, the results which, converted into French francs at the average rate for 1938, show a surplus of receipts of 953,021,522.81f., an increase of 11.8 per cent. over 1937.

As last year, to this figure must be added a purely financial profit which amounts to 65,074,859.74f. and arises from the advantageous conditions in which, during the year, transfers of funds have been made between London and Paris.

BURDEN OF TAXATION ON SHAREHOLDERS

These results warrant our proposing to fix at 900 francs the gross revenue of the Action de Capital, whilst at the same time making all necessary allocations to amortisation and reserve funds. This revenue of 900 francs represents, as compared with that of the previous year, an increase of 9.75 per cent., which approximates the rise in the cost of living in France during the last year. Thus, in spite of the slowing down of general economic activity, the purchasing power represented by the gross revenue of the Action de Capital will have remained practically constant.

If such is not the case for the net revenue, this is due on the one hand to the increase in the rate of French taxes, on the other hand to the fact that profits distributed this year will be subject for the first time to Egyptian income tax. This tax, which was voted last January, affects all payments made since September 1, 1938; its rate, which is at present 7 per cent, is to be gradually increased to 10 per cent during the next three years. Taking the French taxes into account, the fiscal load to be borne by most shareholders of the company has become extremely heavy. It is consequently our earnest wish that between the Egyptian and French Governments a convention on double taxation should rapidly materialise, permitting a limitation of the total fiscal burden imposed by the two States.

TRAFFIC THROUGH THE CANAL

Traffic through the Canal in 1938 amounted to 6,171 transits, representing 34,418,000 tons net register. Although this tonnage shows a reduction of 2,072,000 tons, or 5.7 per cent., on the exceptional figure for 1937, it is nevertheless greater than that for any other year, in particular 1929, a year of great commercial activity.

The reduction, as compared with 1937, is due for the greater part to the falling off of Italo-Abyssinian traffic, which, from one year to the other, dropped by 1,222,000 tons—i. e., more than one-third. Apart from this particular traffic, the reduction is of 851,000 tons—i. e., 2.6 per cent.

The classification of net tonnages by nationalities shows that British traffic still occupies the first place, with a tonnage of 17,358,000 tons, which is 50.4 per cent. of the total, against 47.3 per cent. in 1937. On the other hand, Italian traffic, while still occupying second place, has fallen by more than one-fifth from one year to the other, and its percentage is now only 13.4 per cent., after having been 16.1 per cent. in 1937 and 20.2 per cent. in 1936. Then come Germany, the Netherlands and France.

The number of passengers has fallen from 697,800 to 479,802, the reduction being mainly in passengers of Italian nationality.

Goods through the Canal have, as usual, been more affected than tonnage by causes of depression. The total weight of goods reached 28,779,000 tons, 12.2 per cent. less than in 1937.

The north-south movement, which depends on European exports, has been particularly affected, having had to suffer not only from the state of economic crisis, but also because of the restrictions due to the Sino-Japanese conflict.

From south to north the total was 21,011,000 tons, a reduction of 1,608,000 tons, or 7.1 per cent. on the exceptional results of 1937.

IMPROVED EFFICIENCY

The conditions in which, in 1938, transits of the Canal were made, were fully satisfactory. They bear witness to the continuity of progress made since its origin in the functioning of the great highway of international commerce which the Suez Canal constitutes. Thus, thanks to the improvements carried out, it has been possible in spite of the growth of traffic and the increase in the dimensions of transiting ships, to ensure that these can transit the Canal with ever-increasing ease and security. Whilst during the early years of the working of the Canal there was an average of 150 groundings per thousand transits, this figure was reduced in 1900 to 17; in 1938 it was only three, and even this reduces itself to 1½ per thousand if groundings due to causes of force majeure, such as sudden squalls, fogs or engine breakdowns, are eliminated.

The results just analysed show (as always with a certain time-lag) the evolution of world economy. This economy remained very much depressed during the whole of 1938, and the examination of the present situation does not give much hope of an immediate recovery.

The revival which has shown itself during the last few months in European exports to China and Japan—exports which, as we have already stated, had considerably fallen last year—is, however, to be noted as a favourable symptom as regards Canal traffic. The future remains uncertain and will remain so as long as the evolution of world economy is dominated by the uncertainty of the international political situation. But the day when, as all of us wish, these anxieties disappear, there is every reason to believe that economic activity and international exchanges will rapidly develop; the firmness shown during the last few months by the gold price index of primary commodities is, in this connexion, an encouraging indication. The traffic of the Canal which, in spite of present circumstances, shows a remarkable resistance to a reduction would then have every chance of regaining its upward trend.

Chemical Corp. Plans $30,000,000 Oil Suit

Detroit, June 19 (AP).—William Henry Gallagher, attorney, disclosed today that he had filed in Circuit Court a praecipe of a $30,000,000 suit in behalf of the Chemical Research Corporation against a group of large oil companies and individuals.

Although the suit is understood to involve patent claims, Gallagher said he would not make its nature public until a declaration is filed, probably within 30 days. The praecipe calls for issuance of summons against the defendants named in the suit.

Retail Advertising Continues Gains

Chicago, June 19.—Advertising placed by retailers in the newspapers of 80 leading cities was 5.1 per cent greater during the week ended June 10 than during the corresponding week of 1938, Advertising Age reported today.

During that week a total of 19,887,486 lines of retail display was placed in the newspapers of reporting cities, an increase of 976,000 lines over the corresponding week of last year.

and by a grossly inequitable and obsolete intangible tax. However, some Congressional adjustment is not beyond the realm of possibility."

"With total pay rolls, Government and private, showing a 1938 average monthly aggregate of about $41,000,000, Washington continues to be insulated to a large degree from economic fluctuations. During the past year, local department store sales were only slightly under those of 1937 and, while total bank clearings were not as great for 1938 as for the year previous, nevertheless, they have again begun to increase. Washington bank deposits, having reached a new high in December, 1938, continued to further increase, when, as of March 29, this year, they totaled about $341,000,000."

Newspaper Advertising

The newspaper was the favorite and most effective advertising medium of American savings, building and loan associations of all types in 1938, the Federal Home Loan Bank Review reports. Figures given by the Review were compiled by the Public Relations Department of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in connection with the second annual survey of advertising expenditures by thrift institutions throughout the country.

Average expenditures for savings and loan advertising in newspapers last year amounted to about half the advertising dollar of such associations. Moreover, savings and loan advertising in newspapers was more than five times the advertising used for any other single medium.

In the advertising survey for 1937 conducted a year ago, the first of its kind, it was definitely determined that the newspaper topped all other media for the promotion of savings and loan business. The study was expanded this year with the cooperation of 835 representative associations in all parts of the United States and the result showed that the advertising dollar spent by the average association was divided as follows:

Newspapers, 49.1 cents; miscellaneous media, 15.2 cents; printed material, 9.5; radio, 8.1; billboards, 6.1; house organs, 4.4; window and office display, 3.8; car and bus cards, 1.8; special outside signs, 1.7; motion pictures, 0.3.

"The favorite advertising medium of nearly all business concerns is the newspaper," said the Review. "Savings and loan associations are no exception to this rule as more than nine out of every ten associations used newspapers to reach prospective borrowers and investors."

Rukeyser Says: Wall Street Shrinks Under Reform Reign

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Economic Commentator

New York, June 19.—The delineation of the new Wall street was further marked recently in the folding up of one of the two major financial ticker services. The reform era has certainly succeeded in making the old Wall street shrink.

Undoubtedly many will consider this an advantage, but in all candor the new regime has scarcely been notable for its effect on the profit showing of typical customers of brokerage firms.

Even though the current generation of margin speculators religiously follows the prescriptions of the Federal Reserve Board and assumes hazards in accord with the regulations of the SEC. It has found it difficult to succeed.

If the purpose of a speculative account is capital appreciation, the last eighteen months have not been an outstanding period for customers. Although the new reform legislation may have reduced prospects for loss through manipulation by pools and others, it has been helpless against fluctuations caused by the bad boys of the totalitarian countries, who thus far have not been brought under the surveillance of the SEC.

Virtuous But Not Profitable

Accordingly, though virtue now regins in Wall street by means of new laws, it has not been an especially profitable period. As a matter of fact, customers by and large probably did better—at least until they guessed wrong—during the wicked, old unregulated days when each operator was supposed to take care of himself.

If the old-time successes of customers were ephemeral, at least the wicked old days were more productive of brokerage commissions, transfer and capital gains taxes, and employment for thousands who helped run the kitty in Wall street.

Although crediting the noble fathers of the present regime at Washington with good intentions, I don't think that they have yet hit on a formula for making everybody rich. As a matter of fact, the stock market is still only a barometer and the real problem is to improve the economic weather rather than to tamper with the weathervane.

Industry and Agriculture

It seems to me that there will be no lasting and sustained recovery until raw material prices rise sharply to bring them into balance with industrial costs and prices. If agriculture were brought into balance with industry, then one could be unqualifiedly bullish on the shares of all well managed companies in developing industries.

Meantime, customers and brokers vie together in virtue, though not in profit. As a matter of fact, the brokerage entourage is so busy complying with bureaucratic provisions that it seems to have lost sight of the fact that the motive for trading is a hope of a profit.

Dullness rules the roost, and the sporadic attempt to develop public interest through advertising once the stock exchange lifted the lid was dropped before it had a chance to prove itself.

With speculative machinery crippled, the lay person, after weighing all the facts, is likely to find the best procedure for himself in outright purchase of shares of well managed companies, rather than in the vagaries of regulated marginal speculation. Many question the wisdom of going into debt to buy securities, and some think that, if debt is to be incurred, it should be handled through banks rather than through margin clerks.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, June 19 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Very few inquiries were being received for wool on the Boston market today. The market was quoted nominally around 65@66 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags and around 31@31½, in the grease, delivered, for country packed mixed lots of three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleeces. Some holders continued to ask prices above these quotation ranges despite the slow demand.

Bill Wickham, Hoyt Win in Tournament

Henry Watts Defeats Blanken, 6-3, 7-5, In Slight Upset; No Doubles Carded

Jack Hoyt and Bill Wickham, second and fourth seeded players, led the way yesterday as favorites prevailed in first-round matches of the Junior Davis Cup tennis tournament at Army and Navy Country Club.

The only semblance of an upset as 25 entries opened fire for the title vacated by Allie Ritzenberg was the straight-set victory Henry Watts scored over Bernie Blanken, of the George Washington University tennis squad. The scores were 6—3, 7—5.

Hoyt and Wickham, only seeded players to see action on the first day, defeated Don Hutchinson, 6—3, 7—5, and Eli Gottlieb, 6—1, 6—1, respectively.

Only one match required more than straight sets, and in that S. Clarke defeated Myer Gelfand, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

First Round

Robert Bensinger defeated Charles Freer, 6—1, 6—2; Bill Wickham defeated Eli Gottlieb, 6—1, 6—1; Harold Titus defeated De Witt Armstrong, 8—6, 7—5; Jack Hoyt defeated Don Hutchinson, 6—3, 7—5; Buddy Edwards defeated David Kay, 6—4, 7—5; Henry Watts defeated Bernie Blanken, 6—3, 7—5; S. Clarke defeated Myer Gelfand, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3; John Martin defeated Reef Gillespie, 6—1, 6—3.

Browns Beat Nats in 14th, 2-1; Lose Nightcap to Krakky, 6-1

had an edge on the Nats' knuckle-ball ace from the outset despite the fact that the regulation nine innings brought no score. He allowed the Nats only six hits, and two of the three passes he issued were on orders from the bench.

The hit that beat the Nats in that first game bounced off the bat of Chet Laabs. Appleton, who had moved through the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth nicely, was in trouble from the outset of the fourteenth when he pitched a single to Berardino. A sacrifice put Berardino on second and Kennedy's grounder moved him to third, but with two out the husky Laabs whacked a lengthy triple over George Case's head and the winning run was home.

Three times the Browns put together a pair of hits against Leonard, but they were scoreless until the tenth. The Nats were making little headway against Kennedy, however. They had only three hits to show for the first nine innings—one of them a double by Leonard, another a triple by Lewis and the third a single by Estalella. But all occurred with two out.

Don Heffner scored the run that broke the scoreless tie in the tenth. He greeted Leonard with a single to left, went to second on a sacrifice and scored when Sullivan pulled a single over first base. And then the Nats answered the pleas of the 3,000 fans with the tying run.

Myer Ties Score

Bobby Estalella put the tying run on base with a looping single to center at the start of the tenth and with the Browns anticipating a bunt, Jimmy Bloodworth singled to right to move Estalella to second. Prichard sacrificed the pair along and then Manager Harris dipped into his strategical bag to get the tying run home. With Rick Ferrell drawing a deliberate walk, Harris sent Welaj in to run for Estalella, replaced Ferrell with Sammy West, and sent Myer to bat for Leonard.

Myer moved the tying run home with a grounder to Berardino that forced West at second, reaching first before the Browns could complete a double play. Kennedy wriggled out of the situation without further damage when Case grounded into a force play.

The Nats had the winning run on second with one out when Lewis doubled in the eleventh, but Welaj and Bloodworth couldn't move it home, and Kennedy sealed his victory by retiring the last 11 men in order.

Browns Take Lead

That second game found the Browns taking a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Hoag doubled down the rightfield line, stole third and scored on McQuinn's infield hit, but the Nats reared back and won the game in the same inning.

They did it with a four-run attack on Roxie Lawson, driving him out of the box. They packed four hits into the inning, singles by Case, Travis and Lewis filling the bases before Lawson could get anybody out. Taft Wright's long fly moved one run home, and after Estalella walked to fill the bases again, Bloodworth whistled a single into left to score two more. The fourth run of the inning crossed the plate on Early's infield out.

Krakauskas made that 4-1 lead stand up nicely, and it was well that he did for against the relief pitching of Ed Harris and Howard Mills the Nats made only two hits after the first inning. They came up with a run in the third without the aid of a hit but with the help of a two-base muff by Berardino of Estalella's pop fly. And they improved their lead to 6-1 in the fourth when Taft Wright walloped a triple to right-center with Lewis on base.

Three double plays by the Nats didn't hurt Krakauskas any, although he was holding the Browns to three widely scattered hits in the last seven innings.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Dutch Leonard failed in his bid for his seventh victory of the season yesterday, but he was the outstanding performer among the Nats in the twin bill with the Browns. On the basis of those two games, the distribution of the 20 points in the Man of the Month contest follows:

To Leonard, six points, because he pitched shutout ball for nine innings in the first game and contributed a two-bagger to the Nats' feeble attack.

To Joe Krakauskas, five points, because he held the Browns to six hits in the second game, holding them scoreless after the first inning.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, because he made an important hit in the tenth inning of the first game, and because he drove in two runs and figured in three double plays in the second game.

To Taft Wright, two points, because he drove in two runs in the second game, with a long fly and triple.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because he doubled and tripled in the first game for two of the Nats' hits.

To Bobby Estalella, one point, because he made two of the Nats' hits in the first game and started the tenth-inning rally with a hit.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because he made a hit in the second game and figured in three double plays.

To Pete Appleton, one point, because he pitched scoreless ball for three extra innings in a relief role before yielding the winning run.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, June 19.—A little new buying in late dealings injected life into a sluggish stock market today. British funds replaced small losses with equally small gains, while continental support put transatlantics above parity levels. Oils improved, and many gold stocks moved to the plus side. Industrials were neglected. Far Eastern bonds extended morning declines.

Paris.—Most bourse issues found a firm footing today. Bank of France, however, lost 65 francs. Royal Dutch and Suez Canal edged higher, while rentes closed 30 centimes lower to 50 higher.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed ¾ to ⅞ of a penny lower today in a hesitant trade. Lower shippers' offers of actual wheat and limited cash demand restricted buying. Cotton futures ended 3 to 5 points off on scattered liquidation following early steadiness. Rumors the United States export subsidy would not be enacted spurred morning buying.

10 MINUTES THIS WEEK . . .

IT simply is not sensible to be entirely uninformed about funeral costs. Allot ten minutes this week to an Ethical Funeral Director for a brief discussion of this important matter. You will be glad you did when a death occurs, and you are obliged, in spite of great emotional confusion, to make decisions quickly.

Casual players are always tinkering with conventions, and every now and then their efforts bring forth something really good. A development of the Blackwood bid, for use in bidding strong hands, is offered by Contributor H. A. S. He explains it like this.

"Time after time, the hand responding to an opening two-bid has no way to show the few values he may have so that the pair may reach lay-down slams.

"By taking a few liberties with the Blackwood convention, the slams may now be bid with almost complete assurance. The responses follow:

"Two no trump . . shows . . no aces.
"Three clubs . . shows . . no ace.
"Three diamonds . shows . . two aces.

"The two-bidder again bids normally and the responder with no values bids three no trump. Any other bid and he tells his partner that a further investigation may be in order.

"A four-no-trump bid by the big hand now asks for kings. The responses follow:

"Five clubs . . shows . . no kings.
"Five diamonds . . shows . . one king.
"Five hearts . shows . two kings.

"A five-no-trump bid by the big hand asks for queens, and similar responses indicate the number held.

"This hand, played recently in our small group, illustrates the method at its best:

"Know any other way to arrive at the perfect bid?"

Mrs. John Roosevelt, wife of the President's youngest son, forsook all artificial bids on a fabulous hand dealt to her in a rubber bridge game, and had no difficulty in reaching a grand slam. Her partner, William S. Moore, showed great confidence and self-effacement when he raised her small-slam bid to seven without a card in her trump suit. Many players would have bid seven clubs and robbed their partners of the fun of playing it.

Their adversaries were Mrs. William Atkins and Harry Elder. The cards and the bidding by which Mrs. Roosevelt and Moore reached the grand slam are shown in today's box.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

That display of American china reported by the Diarist as drawing crowds to the Interior Department isn't in the Interior Department at all—it is at Commerce, or was until today. Since April 25 the chinaware has attracted throngs to the Commerce lobby, but it'll be removed to make way for an exhibit of glassware. We're sorry about the boner, Mr. Raul (H. L. Raul, curator, Interior Museum), and we hope all those people who called you up weren't mad.

Here's a chance to enter Uncle Sam's Merchant Marine Service under the Maritime Commission's new program for construction of 500 merchant vessels. George Washington University yesterday opened summer classes in naval architecture and is offering a two-month course in ship designing and marine inspection.

Classes will be held from 5 to 7 p. m. Mondays through Thursdays under the direction of Dr. Arthur F. Johnson, professor of mechanical engineering. The course is being conducted under specifications supplied by the Maritime Commission.

If you feel the need of a brief "back-to-nature" movement to break the dull routine of city life, the National Capital Park Service offers a great chance tomorrow. From 9:30 a. m. until 11:30 a. m. Ranger Naturalist L. W. Kehr will conduct a "nature walk" along Cabin John Run, Md. Those who plan to join him may meet at the end of the Cabin John trolley line. The walk will be repeated, Saturday from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m.

Comes another announcement from the National Park Service telling of plans for the first outdoor campfire program at Pierce Mill picnic grove next Friday. M. R. Tillotson, regional director of the service and one-time superintendent of the Grand Canyon National Park, will describe his experiences in scaling Shiva Temple to "Sky Island" of the Grand Canyon. His talk will be illustrated with color movies and still pictures.

West Virginians and their friends will take in the New York World's Fair on a two-day trip, leaving here at 4:55 p. m. Friday. The West Virginia Society has arranged for a special car to accommodate the party and reminds guests that Saturday is West Virginia Day at the Fair.

Uncle Sam is giving a Fourth of July present to more than 1,000 families this year. From Florida to New York, slum-clearance projects will be completed and Independence Day will be moving day for many fortunate families.

The Department of Interior wants you to know that west-bound travelers this summer will have greater opportunity than ever before to visit the Nation's outstanding scenic areas in more than a score of national parks.

From the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific Coast, automobile roads have been improved and new facilities for the convenience of tourists are now available. The travel season, says park spokesmen, usually begins June 20 and continues to September 1. Thousands of tourists are expected to take advantage of the improved facilities and the Interior Department is looking forward to a banner season.

Tourists who like to take their travels with a bit of historical background will be interested in a new booklet issued by Interior called "Manassas to Appomattox," giving a comprehensive sketch of events in the Eastern theater of conflict during the War between the States. Each battle is described in detail and the 32-page booklet tells you what to see and where to see it.

Eastern Shore buyers, bootleggers and trappers of migratory waterfowl are still running afoul of the law, according to the Biological Survey. Nine persons in Delaware were arrested and convicted for buying wild ducks, bringing the Eastern Shore total to 51 prosecutions in recent weeks. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Bob Burns Says—

In the big cities around the country, you can hardly cross the streets because of all the taxicabs. New York and Chicago have a taxi for every man, woman and child in them towns, I'll bet. The greatest pleasure I ever got from ridin' in taxies was the wonderful, carefree feelin' I got when the driver crumbled a fender.

Uncle Sankey used to work in one of them Michigan automobile factories where they made taxicabs. He worked at one job there for nineteen years. Then one day he called the foreman over and said, "Mr. Teagle, I'm gonna ask you to let me tighten bolt No. 25-Z instead of 62-S. I think the change'll do me good."

Tobacco Sales Not Hit In Tientsin Blockade

Richmond, Va., June 19 (AP).—Tobacco exporters here said today Japanese-British difficulties at Tientsin, China had had no depressing effect on leaf exports.

Japanese, Chinese and importers operating in Japanese and Chinese ports have purchased quantities of American tobacco for many years.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XIV

The water was clear, for the hogs were feeding to the north in the marshy prairies, and had no need of the sink-hole. A small green frog eyed the boy from a partly submerged twig. The nearest water was a couple of miles away. It seemed amazing that frogs should travel so far, to settle in a small and distant pool. He wondered if the first frog migrants had known that there was water here, when they hopped to the rim of the sink-hole and hesitated on their green haunches. Penny said that once in rainy weather he had seen a line of frogs in single file, like marching soldiers, crossing the dry flat-woods. Did they move blindly or with knowledge? Penny did not know. Jody flipped a frond of fern into the pool and the frog dove and hid himself in the soft muck.

A SENSE OF ALONENESS that was not lonely came to the boy. He decided that when he was grown he would build himself a little house beside the pool. The animals would become used to it, and he would look out of the windows on moonlit nights and see them drinking.

He crossed the flat floor of the sink-hole and climbed a few feet to reach the stock trough. It was awkward, bringing the grubbing hoe over his shoulder and into the trough. He discarded it and went at his work with his two hands. An accumulation of leaves and sand had left a thick layer. He dug and scraped vigorously. He worked against the creeping moisture, trying to hold the trough dry and empty for an instant. The seepage had returned by the time he took his hands away. The limestone trough was white and clean. He left it with satisfaction and moved higher up the bank to the more laborious work of scouring out the larger wash troughs. Constant use kept these comparatively free from leaves, but the soapsuds in time made them slippery. He climbed a sweet gum and gathered an armful of Spanish moss. It made good scouring material. He scooped sand from a bare spot on the bank and used it with the moss.

He was tired when he reached the drinking trough at the top. The incline was so steep that by resting his belly flat against the bank, he needed only to lower his head, like a fawn, to drink. He ran his tongue up and down the length of the trough. He darted it in and out and leaned back to watch the ripples. He wondered whether a bear lapped water like a dog or sucked it in like a deer. He imagined himself a bear and drank both ways, deciding. Lapping was slower, but he choked when he sucked the water in. He could not decide. Penny would know how a bear drank. He had probably actually seen them.

JODY BURIED his face completely in the water. He turned it from side to side, so that first one cheek and then the other was laved and cooled. He stood on his head in the trough, resting his weight on the palms of his hands. He tried to see how long he could hold his breath. He made bubbles. He heard his father's voice at the bottom of the sink-hole.

"Son, how come that water to feel so good to you? Put the same thing in the washbasin, you act like 'twas something nasty."

"Pa, I never heered you comin'."

"You had your dirty leetle ol' face too deep in what your pore Pa was fixin' to take a drink of."

"I wa'n't dirty, Pa. The water ain't riled."

"I ain't that thirsty."

Penny climbed the bank and examined the lower troughs. He nodded. He leaned over the rim of the wash trough and chewed a twig.

"I declare," he said, "Your Ma purely shocked me when she said 'twenty years.' I jest hadn't never set down and reckoned the time. The years has slipped by me, one by one, me not noticin' nor countin.' Ever' spring, I'd figger to git your Ma a well dug. Then I'd need a ox, or the cow'd bog down and perish, or one o' the young uns'd put in and die and I'd have no heart for well-diggin', and medicine to pay for. Bricks so turrible high—When I begun diggin' oncet, and got no water at 30 feet, I knowed I was in for it. But 20 years is too long to ask ary woman to do her washin' on a seepage hillside."

Jody listened gravely.

He said, "We'll git her a well one day."

"Twenty years—" Penny repeated. "But always somethin' interferin'. And the war—and then the land to be cleared all over agin."

He stood leaning against the trough, looking backward along the years.

"When I first come here," he said, "when I picked this place and come to it, I hoped——"

The morning's question came to Jody's mind again.

"How come you to pick it, Pa?"

"Well, I picked it because—" His face puckered, his mind seeking words. "I jest craved peace, was all." He smiled. "Out here I got it, excusin' the bears and panthers and wolves and wildcats—and now and agin, your Ma."

They sat in silence. The squirrels began to stir in the treetops. Suddenly Penny poked Jody in the ribs with his elbow.

"Look at that scaper, peekin' at us."

HE POINTED to a sweet gum. A half-grown raccoon was peering around the side of the trunk, a dozen feet from the ground. It saw itself observed and pulled back out of sight. In an instant the masked face looked again.

Penny said, "I reckon we be as cur'ous to the creeturs as they be to us."

"How come some is skeert and some is bold?"

"That I don't know. It depend, likely, on how young a creetur is scairt. They don't seem to be no rule for it. I mind me, oncet, I'd been huntin' all mornin'—this were over on Wild-cat Prairie—and I set down under a live oak and made me a leetle fire to warm me and cook me a bit o' bacon. Well, whilst I was settin' there, a fox walked right up t'other side of the fire and laid down. I looked at him and he looked at me. I figgered mebbe he were hungry. I takened a piece of meat and I jobbed it on a long stick and I helt it out to him. I helt it right over his nose. Now a fox is mighty wild and I ain't never knowed one to git that hongry to where he wouldn't run. And you know that fox laid there right on, lookin' at me and never et nor run."

"I'd love to of seed him. What you figger made him lay there, Pa, lookin' at you?"

"Hit's been a puzzlement to me all these years since it happened. All I kin figger is, the dogs had run him until he got heated and his brains was cooked. I figger, for some reason, that fox were cold-out crazy."

The 'coon had moved into full view.

Jody said, "Pa, I wisht I had me somethin' to pet and play with, like Fodder-Wing. I wisht I had me a 'coon, or a bear cub, or sich as that."

Penny said, "You know how your Ma rares. I'd not mind it, for I love the creeturs. But times has been hard and rations scarce, and your Ma's the one to say."

"I'd love a baby fox, or a baby panther. Kin you tame 'em, do you git 'em young?"

"You kin tame a 'coon. You kin tame a bear. You kin tame a wildcat and you kin tame a panther." He pondered. His mind went back to his father's sermons. "You kin tame arything, son, excusin' the human tongue."

JODY LAY comfortably ill, recovering from the fever. His mother called it the fever, so he did not argue. He thought privately that too many half-ripe brierberries might have something to do with his ailment. Treatment for such things was always much more violent than treatment for the fever. His mother had observed his shaking, had laid her big hand on his forehead and said, "Git into the bed. You got chills and fever." He had said nothing.

She came into the room now with a cup of steaming liquid. He eyed it anxiously. For two days she had been giving him lemon-leaf tea. It was aromatic and pleasant. When he had grumbled about its tartness, she had added a teaspoon of jelly to it. He wondered if now, in the mysterious wisdom that sometimes descended on her, she had discovered the truth. If she guessed that his trouble had been the colic, the medicine she held would be either snake-root tonic, or a blood purifier made from Queen's Delight, both of which he abominated.

"If your Pa'd only plant me a root o' fever grass," she said, "I could git both o' you well o'the fever in no time. 'Tain't decent, not havin' fever-grass in the yard."

"What you got in the cup, Ma?"

"None o' your business. Open your mouth."

"I got a right to know. Supposin' you kilt me and I never knowed what medicine you give me."

"Hit's mullein tea, if you got to know. Hit come to me, could be you was comin' down with the measles."

"'Tain't the measles, Ma."

"How do you know? You ain't never had 'em. Open your mouth. If 'tain't the measles, this here won't hurt you. If 'tis the measles, hit'll bring out the rash."

THE THOUGHT OF bringing out a rash was tempting. He opened his mouth. She grasped him by the hair and poured half the cupful down his throat. He sputtered and fought.

"Well, you'll die if 'tis, and the rash don't break out."

He opened his mouth again and took the rest of the mullein tea. It was bitter, but not nearly as bad as some of her concoctions. The bitter brew she made from pomegranate peelings, or that from pitcher-plant root, was infinitely worse. He lay back on his moss-stuffed pillow.

"If 'tis the measles, Ma, how soon will the rash come?"

"Soon as you git to sweatin' from the tea. Kiver up."

She left the room and he resigned himself to waiting for the sweat. Being sick was something of a treat. He would not willingly go through the first night again, when cramps had tied him in knots. But the convalescence, the solicitude of his mother and his father, was definitely pleasant. He felt a faint sense of guilt that he had not told about the brierberries. She would have given him a purge, and it would all have been over with by the next morning. Penny had done all the work of the clearing alone for two days. He had hitched old Caesar to the plow and plowed over the sugar-cane and hilled it up, had worked the corn and the cow-peas and the small patch of tobacco. He had hauled water from the sink-hole, cut wood, fed and watered the stock.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

C.I.O., Alliance Launch Attacks On Relief Bill

Senate Hearings Slated To Begin Today on $1,735,000,000 Bill

With Senate hearings scheduled to begin today, the $1,735,000,000 relief bill was subjected last night to attacks by both the C. I. O. and the Workers Alliance.

Meanwhile, Col. F. C Harrington, WPA Administrator, and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the special committee to investigate unemployment and relief, discussed the bill with President Roosevelt at the White House.

Denouncing A. F. of L. leaders for their failure to oppose the measure passed by the House Saturday, Ralph Hetzel, jr., C. I. O. unemployment director, said "hundreds of thousands of A. F. of L. workers will be thrown on the streets" through the operation of the bill.

Called Recovery Blow

"The high officials of the A. F. of L. have sold out the interests of their membership for the benefit of the building contractors associations," said Hetzel. He warned that the bill will "practically destroy the WPA."

David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, called the bill "the heaviest blow at recovery of the season." He said "40 per cent of the present WPA rolls will be out on the streets in the next 60 days."

Provisions of the bill requiring administrative employes to give an oath of allegiance and denying WPA aid to persons advocating forcible overthrow of the Government "are supposed to be aimed at the Workers Alliance," said Lasser.

Secret Service Celebrates 75th Birthday Early, to Be Ready for President's Trip

Harris & Ewing.

Supervising agents of the United States Secret Service met in Washington yesterday for their annual conference and marked the seventy-fifth anniversary of the service. Front row (left to right), J. J. McGrath, New York; Thomas J. Callaghan, Chicago; Arthur F. Grube, Los Angeles; Joseph E. Murphy, assistant chief; Frank J. Wilson, chief; Thomas B. Sorrells, Houston, Tex.; George E. Boos, Detroit; F. W. Gruber, Newark; William A. Landvoigt, Philadelphia; John J. Maloney, New York; Alonzo Andrews, Louisville; William R. Jarrell, Seattle. Rear (left to right), Charles Mazey, St. Paul, Minn.; E. W. Starling, chief of White House detail; Frank L. Halliday, Cleveland; William H. Davenport, Kansas City; Roland K. Goddard, Denver, and Harry L. Barker, Boston

The United States Secret Service yesterday celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary—two weeks in advance—by opening a week of conferences under direction of Chief Frank J. Wilson on ways to improve its work.

Although the organization will not be 75 years old until July 2, it decided to observe the anniversary at this time because of uncertainty over the time of President Roosevelt's projected transcontinental tour.

Chief Wilson wants the 16 regional supervising agents, gathered here for the conferences, back at their posts when the President starts his trip.

Addressing the men at the opening session, Wilson told them the organization's aim should be to continue in the future the effective job it had done in the past.

The Secret Service was founded under an act passed by Congress on July 2, 1864, to suppress counterfeiting. This was a problem in Civil War days. The Government had been issuing "greenbacks" for two years to finance the war.

It was not until after McKinley was assassinated that the organization was assigned the task of protecting the President. It has another special assignment, namely, cases involving forgery of Government checks.

Arrangements are being made in the conferences for broadening the educational campaign against counterfeiting. The campaign, Wilson declared, has been highly effective.

Boy Kidnaped By Baboons Lived as Tarzan

Recaptured by Humans He Spoke Only Apes' Guttural Sounds

By the United Press.

London, June 19.—The Tarzan existence of a 12-year-old colored boy kidnaped and reared by a tribe of enormous baboons in South Africa was reported today by Prof. R. Ruggles Gates, expert on heredity at King's College, the University of London.

Gates published a statement made by Prof. Raymond Dart, of the University of South Africa, describing how the boy, who was 12 when found, could make only the gutteral sounds of the baboons with whom he had lived.

The boy, named Lucas now, learned to speak the "Afrikaans" dialect of South Africa, the report said, and was able to give a vivid account of his life with the baboons.

"My food consisted mainly of crickets, ostrich eggs, prickly pears, green mealies and wild honey," he said. "I was kicked on the head by an ostrich while raiding its nest and often was stung by bees while robbing their hives.

"While with the baboons I walked on all fours and slept in the bush entirely naked.

"I was hunting food one day with my baboon companions when two policemen shot at us with revolvers and I was captured by one of the policemen."

Prof. Gates said he believed the boy's account. He said it was the first known case of a child being adopted and raised by anthropoids, although bears and wolves have been reported in several instances to have reared human beings.

Shipbuilding Students Flock to Summer School

The tables were turned on local school teachers yesterday as children got out their fishing tackle or swimming suits while the teachers stayed in school.

With modern education changing as swiftly as women's styles, hundreds of school teachers and administrators turned up at George Washington University yesterday to learn the latest wrinkles at the summer session. Also much in evidence among the nearly 2,000 who registered yesterday were a group of naval architects and marine engineers, mostly in Government service, who signed for the university's first summer course in shipbuilding.

The course is planned to turn out designers and inspectors for the Government's program of building 500 vessels for the American merchant marine.

Carl K. Maholm, Internal Revenue Official, Dies

Carl K. Maholm, reviewer in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, succumbed to a heart attack while at work in his office yesterday. He was 56.

A native of Shelbyville, Ind., Mr. Maholm came to Washington 21 years ago. He served in France during the World War and was a member of the Masons, Order of Eastern Star, the First Congregational Church of Indianapolis, and Calvary Baptist Church here. Surviving are his wife, Colla, and a son, Thomas A. Maholm. He lived at 5519 Third street northwest.

Services will be held Thursday at 2:30 p. m. in Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Bill to Benefit Panama Canal Builders Vetoed

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a Senate bill to grant special retirement benefits to civilian officers and employes who helped build the Panama Canal.

In a message returning the measure to the Senate, the President said he turned down the legislation with regret, adding that the Civil Service Commission did not feel justified in recommending any further special recognition for such workers.

Col. William Peak's Funeral Today

Services for Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, who was killed in an automobile accident Friday night, will be held at 10 a. m. today at the Immaculate Conception Church, with burial in Arlington Cemetery with military honors. The Board of Public Welfare yesterday named Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman; Dr. H. J. Crosson, Edgar Morris and James A. Councilor to represent the board at the funeral.

2 Preachers Never 'Imagined' Nudity They Found at Fair

By the United Press.

New York, June 19.—Two ministers who did the hot spots of the New York World's Fair Thursday night in a four-hour search for nudity said tonight they had found it, in the words of one of them, "beyond anything I had ever imagined."

The ministers were the Rev. George Drew Egbert, president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, and the Rev. Frederick Bowlby, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States. They were accompanied by James J. Munro, vice president of the Brooklyn Holy Name Society; Sheriff Maurice A. Fitzgerald, and Austin Mandel, the sheriff's lawyer.

"It was not only the nudity," the Rev. Mr. Egbert explained. "There were other things that I could not tell you about."

The Rev. Mr. Bowlby also was dubious about telling a reporter the things that go on at the fair. He has been at the fair three times, he said, and protested once to Grover Whalen, fair president, but received no reply.

"There was one act at N. T. G.'s Congress of Beauty," the Rev. Mr. Bowlby said, "which was disgustingly revolting. Oh, I couldn't tell you about it in so many words. It was seductive."

The Rev. Mr. Egbert said parts of the N. T. G. show were all right. "Some of the music was unexceptionable," he said, "and there were one or two beautiful scenes. But then it grew progressively worse until the climax and I couldn't describe that to you."

He thought that if the show were censored N. T. G. would have "practically no show at all." He thinks License Commissioner Paul Moss and Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine, to whom he has written letters of protest, will have to close it.

"The things I saw were beyond anything I had ever imagined," he said.

He rated the dancing at the Cuban Village as pretty bad, too, and the Rev. Mr. Bowlby, who agreed with him, thought a place called Crystal Lassies, where a nude girl dances before a lot of mirrors—was worth the license commissioner's attention.

"We propose to stay by this thing as long as is necessary," the Rev. Mr. Bowlby said, adding he has a plan which he thinks will take care of things if the commissioners don't get busy. He refused to say what the plan was but seemed confident.

Later today, two of the young ladies whose displays were viewed by the two ministers were arrested and given suspended sentences, along with two men associated with the shows. Police denied, however, that the arrests were part of a campaign, insisting that "it is just ordinary police work" and disclosing that "we have our eyes on them all."

3 D. C. Students Finish Yale Today With Honors

They are Richard H. Wilmer, honors and exceptional distinction in English; Robert H. Gemmill, honors in history, and Marvin J. Fahrenbach, one of the two members of the Sheffield Scientific School to receive highest honors. His major was in chemistry.

Cawnpore, India, June 19 (AP).—Three persons were killed and 36 wounded in a new outbreak of religious rioting today, eight of them wounded when police fired on a mob. British troops were rushed to the riot area.

Destroyer to Take Princesses to Ship

Aboard Empress of Britain, June 19 (AP).—The royal yacht steered a swift course through the mid-North Atlantic tonight taking King George and Queen Elizabeth back to Southampton.

Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose will use a destroyer and a royal barge to meet the Empress to spend an hour with King George and Queen Elizabeth before the liner docks Thursday.

Clipper Lands 18 Passengers At Marseille

Marseille, France, June 19 (AP).—The Atlantic Clipper moistened its metal snout in the blue Mediterranean today to complete a 42-hour and 28-minute flight of 4,650 miles from New York with 18 persons privileged to make the first Atlantic crossing in a plane operating by timetable.

Actual flying time was 29 hours and 49 minutes.

Average speed from New York was 156.4 miles an hour.

The big ship will start the return flight to America Thursday. Regular passenger service starts June 28.

Dionne Quints Too Fat; Dafoe Orders Dieting

Callander, Ontario, June 19 (Canadian Press).—The Dionne Quintuplets have been put on a diet because they are "a little too fat," Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe announced today.

The diet cuts down on starches and sugars. It is not strict, but potatoes are banned completely.
